he call of Mayors Payne and Nel- for a ratification meeting of the offer met a hearty response, re- ing in a large and enthusiastic d assembling at the Masonic tre last night and in rousing eches endorsed Ford against all ers and especially what a number cially against what a number of peakers called the "11th hour ef- " of the Alabama Power company its associates to defeat the Ford r, and finally the unanimous adop- of strong resolutions bearing on present controversy over the dis- ition of Muscle Shoals.

With W. W. Rahm presiding and R. Shelton acting as secretary, eches were made by Mayor E. C. ne, of Albany, Mayor J. A. Nel- of Decatur, H. O. Cline, president the Albany city council, former bate Judge W. E. Skeggs, Probate ge L. P. Troup, Mrs. W. B. Ed- ndson, John A. Thomason, F. F. well, W. G. Johnson of Hartselle, . Mayor Payne

Mayor E. C. Payne reviewed the tory of the Muscle Shoals project, owing that but for Ford the whole perty was about to be scrapped. . Payne paid his respects to the abama Power company in no uncer- n terms. He said public sentiment, thout exception, was for Henry Ford d against any other man or corpo- ion as the rightful operator of uscle Shoals. Referring to the ser- e of the Alabama Power company the city of Albany, Mr. Payne said: promised us cheaper lights—did keep its word? They will promise, t give you little." This speaker ticized those members of the Albany y council who agreed to sign the t contract with the Alabama Power mpany, saying "now lights can be one hour and 59 minutes without dress."

H. O. Cline

H. O. Cline said there was not a rson west of the Mississippi or uth of the Mason and Dixon line, ho was not heart and soul for the rd offer. This speaker said that idently the Alabama Power com- any now had more on its hands than could do. "There is no head nor ot to it," declared Cline. The action the government in putting the ni- ate plant up at Muscle Shoals was artily commended.

Mr. Cline said that such action and e efforts of an aroused nation, to- ether with the prayers of the Christ- n people "sent the German Kaiser Holland and won the war."

"After the war the Shoals project ecame a 'white elephant'; and the overnment was about to scrap it hen Mr. Weeks asked Ford to bid n it."

The speaker did not think Ford as being dealt fairly with and pre- icted "a temporary revolution" if the overnment turned a deaf ear to the agnificant plans and ideas of the

BUILDING CROWDED AS EXPOSITION AND AUTOMOBILE SHOW THROW DOOR OPEN

Many Prominent Men Will Come Here During Big Show

NEIGHBOR CITIES TO HAVE SPECIAL DAYS

Magnificent Booklet To Be Issued, Setting Forth Natural Advantages

The Tennesse Valley and Muscle Shoals Industrial Exposition opened here today under most favorable circumstances.

Never before has there been such a gathering of exhibits representative of the resources of North Alabama and Southern Tennessee—exhibits of the crude materials and minerals of the Muscle Shoals district and of North Alabama and Southern Tennessee in general.

Co-incident with the opening of the exposition on the upper floors of the Malone building, the fifth annual automobile show of the Malone Coal, Grain and Motor company opened on the lower floor of the big exposition structure. Admission to the show is free and thousands today swarmed through the exhibit rooms and viewed the attractive displays of handsome cars. All preparations had been completed for the automobile show and the beautifully decorated showrooms attracted much attention.

The 10 days of the exposition will be crowded with important events. Leaders in the industrial world of the country and men prominent in public life will be here to assist in the work of letting the world know of the industrial advantages of this section, not only for the welfare of the South but for the people of the whole country who will receive the greatest benefit when the natural storehouse of minerals and crude materials of this section is utilized in making essentials for the people.

There will be several "special days" at which time there will be represented various cities and sections of the country by special delegations which will come to attend the exposition and to see the Muscle Shoals district.

The site of dam No. 3, which is but a few miles down the river from Albany-Decatur, will be a point of interest to all visitors owing to the fact that it is this dam that will supply the great commercial power for the factories that will spring up here as soon as this great dam is constructed, whether constructed by Henry Ford or some other individual or company. This dam will be approximately 17 miles this side of the nitrate plant.

Many people from various parts of the United States have already arrived to attend the exposition and the president of the chamber of commerce of Albany, C. D. Patterson, and the president of the Kiwanis club, J. H. Calvin, are delighted with the prospects of a country-wide attendance. The exposition has been fostered by these two organizations and by representative citizens. James W. Paige, an industrial engineer who has had broad experience in industrial development work in the southern states and in Chicago, has had the active charge of the industrial development campaign which is connected with the exposition.

A magnificent booklet is being issued by the local organizations, the object being to make a graphic presentation of the possibilities of the Muscle Shoals section along industrial lines. Many special maps and charts and illustrations have been prepared that the presentation might be made as broad as possible.

POSTOFFICE AND STORES ROBBED AT FALKVILLE

A wholesale robbery occurred at Falkville supposedly about midnight Friday night and the following stores were burglarized: the drug store of Dr. J. B. Elliott and the general merchandise store of J. B. Dinsmore. The Louisville and Nashville depot was also broken open and in each instance considerable quantities of valuable merchandise was taken.

The postoffice met a similar fate, and the safe kept in the office was battered into, the robbers evidently using a sledge hammer with which to batter the door off. Considerable quantities of postoffice supplies was missing and about $20 in cash.

It is said that about midnight some residents of the town heard heavy knocks being administered, but gave no further thought to it. When the town awoke and business men started to the business of the day there was revealed one of the boldest robberies ever committed there.

Blood hounds were sent for and a determined effort was made Saturday to apprehend those responsible for the crimes.

No one has entered the postoffice since the robbery, it being the idea to stay out that the dogs might have a better chance to trail the thieves.

The citizens are thoroughly aroused over the repeated robberies that have occurred there during the past few months, and no effort will be spared to catch the guilty ones.

Dogs were procured from Moulton and taken to the scene of the robbery, and were unable to carry the trail for more than two miles south. It was later discovered that not very much merchandise was missed from

President Has Narrow Escape Walking Street

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—President Harding's alertness tonight saved him from being run down by a street car. The President was returning from a half-hour walk down Pennsylvania avenue and was within sight of the white house when the near-accident occurred.

At 15th street, one of the most congested traffic points in the city, the President started briskly across the street ahead of his bodyguards. He had reached the car tracks before he realized that a street car was coming towad him at fairly good speed.

The President dashed forward quickly and fairly ran to the curb on the opposite side, narrowly escaping being struck by an automobile. Secret service men who jumped in behind him missed being grazed by the street car only by inches.

KIWANIS ENDORSE FORD PROPOSAL

The following message was sent to the two Alabama senators and Representative Almon by the Morgan Kiwanis club:

"We believe Muscle Shoals development through acceptance of Ford's proposition is of supreme importance to the entire country. We are expecting you and every member of the Alabama delegation to put forth every possible effort and to overcome all obstructing propositions. We stand unitedly for immediate and unqualified acceptance of Ford's offer. Morgan Kiwanis Club."

JUDGE LANDIS HAS RESIGNED POSITION ON FEDERAL BENCH

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 18—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, probably the best known jurist in the United States, resigned his post as judge of the United States district court here today. He will relinquish his judicial office on March 1.

His resignation was forwarded to President Harding today. Judge Landis retires from a life position as a United States jurist to devote his entire time to organized baseball, of which he is high commissioner. The judge is 55 years old.

RATE DECISION OF INTEREST TO LABOR

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 18—The United States railway labor board tonight handed down a decision which will authorize the reduction of wages 25 per cent under the standard scale on the Missouri and North Arkansas railroad, which suspended operations on July 31.

The decision was regarded as having far-reaching possibilities in that it sets a precedent. The order is expected to result in re-opening of the railroad which is the sole transportation facility for residents in the 15 counties in Missouri and Arkansas.

LYNNE PROBABLY WILL MAKE RACE FOR CHIEF PLACE IN HIGHEST COURT

Local Attorney Admits He Is Likely To Make Announcement Soon

OPPOSES ANDERSON FOR CHIEF JUSTICE

Lynn Has Occupied Prominent Position In State's Official Life

S. A. Lynne, of Decatur, speaker of the Alabama house of representatives at the special sessions in 1920 and 1921 and one of the best known persons in public life in Alabama, probably will be a candidate for chief justice of the supreme court in the Democratic primary August 8. It became known Saturday that Mr. Lynne has been giving consideration to the campaign for several weeks and admitted that he probably will make his formal announcement during the next few days.

"When the legislature completed the work of the special session of 1921 it had been my intention to return to my home and not enter the campaign of this year," said Mr. Lynne, in commenting on the report that he would seek the chief justiceship. "Many of my friends of the bar and others not members of the bar have requested me to become a candidate for the position. I am not unmindful of the great honor which would come with election to the chief justiceship of the highest court of Alabama. I am not unmindful of the confidence which has been shown by my friends who have requested me to make the campaign. I am considering the matter and probably will have a statement to make during the next few days."

Mr. Lynne has been a figure in the public life of Alabama since the beginning of the twentieth century. As a young attorney, Mr. Lynne took part in the campaigns which preceded the constitutional convention of 1901. After the new constitution was adopted he was elected a member of the state senate, beginning this service in 1903.

Mr. Lynne went back to the legislature in 1919 as the representative of Morgan county. He became an active figure at once, being the leader of the floor for many of the measures of state importance. On the retirement of Henry P. Merritt, of Macon, from the speakership at the beginning of the special session of 1920, Mr. Lynne was elected speaker of the house by the unanimous vote of the members. He held this position throughout the special session and the special session of 1921.

Among the measures of state importance which were enacted under the floor leadership of Mr. Lynne during the regular session of 1919 were the bills providing for a state health system which has since become among the best known of the United States and the bill creating a state educational code and providing a state board of education which has been pronounced by educators of the nation as one of the most advanced of the United States.

When Mr. Lynne enters the race he will be opposed by Judge John C. Anderson, who has been chief justice since January 15, 1914. Judge Anderson was promoted to the chief justiceship as the successor of James R. Dowdell, resigned. He was elected November 3, 1914, for the full unexpired term of Judge Dowdell and was re-elected for a full term of six years which will expire next January.

HOUSE COMMITTEE MINDS MUDDLED BY NEW DEVELOPMENT IN SHOALS HEARINGS

People of South Demanding Immediate Acceptance Of The Ford Offer

CHIEF ENGINEER HAS RETURNED TO DETROIT

Rumored He Will Hold Further Conference With The Manufacturer

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—With testimony before it showing that the people of the South demand immediate acceptance by congress of Henry Ford's offer to lease Muscle Shoals and widely diversified expressed opinions in favor and in condemnation of the Ford proposal, the house military affairs committee tonight was admittedly in a muddle.

Developments today indicated that the disclosed extent of the project which Ford proposed to lease from the government has determined the committee to demand modification to the Ford contract before suggesting that congress approve it.

W. B. Mayo, chief of Ford's engineers, who has been in Washington as the Detroit manufacturer's spokesman, left early tonight for Detroit.

Capitol comment held the purpose of his visit is to put up to Ford demands of some of the committee that the contract be changed to incorporate stronger guarantees, particularly with reference to the production of fertilizers at Muscle Shoals.

Mayo today presented Representative James, of Michigan, a member of the committee, with an estimate of the specific amounts of fertilizer Ford proposes to manufacture. Comparative figures for the different processes of manufacture were furnished James.

Manyo pointed out to James that the production of nitrate plant Number 2 amounts to 110,000 tons of ammonium nitrate. This will furnish 38,500 tons of pure nitrogen which under varying process of manufacture will produce the following amounts of fertilizer: The 2-8-2 process for commercial fertilizer manufacture, 1,925,000 tons of fertilizer; the 3-8-3 process, 1,283,300 tons of fertilizer; the 4-8-4 process, 962,500 tons.

The pure nitrate would also produce 190,000 tons of ammoonium sulphate and 240,000 tons of nitrate of soda.

James will have the estimates incorporated in the committee's record and witn other members of the committee will voice insistence that they be written into the Ford contract. If Ford will agree to this modification of his contract it will have a big influence on the ultimate determination of the committee on the proposal, it was declared by members.

Mrs. Sid Hatfield, after losing two husbands in Mingo County's industrial war, has left Mattewan, W. Va., wtih her third husband, Sylvester H. Pettry, member of the State Constabulary.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm.

THE HANDS

WHEN the hands hang limply at the side, and are heavy, thick, and fat, you may deduce therefrom, generally, that the intellect of the possessor will be likewise heavy and "fat." All is density, and there is no use trying to raise the possessor of such a hand out of the depths of materialism. When you read his or her hand, says one authority, "if you attempt a keen analysis, he will blankly stare at you. No use trying to lift him out of his trough of materialism. It can't be done. He wants to know his brother's name, whether he is married, how many children, how long he will live, whether he will be rich, and you cannot lift him above this plane."

Last, we have the cautious person who enters your room with an air of investigation and with the hands carried behind the back, where they are clasped. This person is timid and well meaning, but suspicious of the value and merits and standing of palmistry. You must deal gently with him; he is open to conviction, but must be led and cannot be driven.

HAVE A CRACKER

CRACKERS are the ever-ready-stand-by of the "up-to-the-minute" housewife. They will keep indefinitely if kept dry and air-tight. If they do soften—five minutes in a hot oven will crisp them again as good as fresh ones. Any kind of crackers, sweet, graham, oatmeal or ginger may be used for a dainty sandwich to be served with a cup of tea or a refreshing drink. An old-fashioned dish and one good for an invalid or a child is cracker soup. Toast the crackers until brown, spread with butter, sprinkle with a little sugar and pour over hot milk.

A sweet cracker put together with marmalade, jelly, cream cheese, nuts or any other good filling makes a good substitute for cake.

Graham Cracker Pudding.

Take four tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of vanilla, the yolk of an egg and a pinch of salt, mix well, then add three cupfuls of finely rolled graham crackers, three-fourths of a cupful of milk, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder; lastly fold in the well-beaten egg white, add one-half cupful of dates cut in bits, with the stones removed. Steam for one and one-half hours. Serve with a hard sauce or whipped cream.

Cheese and Cracker Supper Dish.

Spread milk crackers with butter and cover with finely minced or grated cheese; place in a baking dish until enough have been prepared to serve the family. Cover with a custard, using two eggs to a pint of milk, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt and a generous sprinkling of paprika over all. Bake in a moderate oven until the custard is set. Do not overcook or the cheese will be stringy. Serve hot from the baking dish.

Tomato English Monkey.

Take one and one-fourth cupfuls of cracker crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of butter and three-fourths of a cupful of milk. Beat two eggs, add salt, pepper, a pinch of soda, one and one-third cupfuls of cheese; add to the scalded milk. When the cheese has melted add three-fourths of a cupful of tomato strained, stirring until well mixed. Serve on hot toasted crackers.

WHY—

OXYGEN is one of the elements of the air which is essential to the healthy, normal action of the lungs. Unless a sufficient quantity of oxygen is taken into the body, the lungs become irritated and flash a signal to the brain that a larger supply is necessary. The easiest method to overcome this shortage of oxygen is, of course, to take in an increased amount of air at one time. Hence the nerves which regulate our breathing apparatus react upon our jaw and throat muscles, causing both of them to open wide. Expansion of the lungs at the same time results in the inhalation of a much larger amount of air than is obtainable through ordinary breathing, thus supplying the needed amount of oxygen.

The reason that yawning is usually connected with a feeling of drowsiness is because a desire for sleep is a sign that the body is tired and is seeking a stimulant of some kind—either rest or an added amount of oxygen, the fuel which keeps the human furnace burning brightly. The satisfaction which follows a yawn is due to the fact that the blood has received an extra supply of the material which it needs and we immediately feel the benefit of this.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Moths and the Political Candle

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

HAVE you ever been in Washington?

What a beautiful city it is. The most beautiful of our chain of American beauties.

Dignified, spacious, with broad avenues sweeping from the top of Capitol Hill down to the Potomac, and across the river the final mansions standing like sentinels to guard the slumber of the valiant dead at Arlington.

How proud we've all been of our Nation's capital, while those foreign visitors were here.

Contrast noble simplicity and proud dignity with the capital of any other nation in the world, and there is no cause for apology—not one—for Washington.

And the luncheons and the breakfasts and the teas, and the dinners, and the embassies and the attaches, and the silk hats and the smart frocks, and the gossip and the tittle-tattle—and the politics!

And oh, the homesick, lonesome people!

The wives of the congressmen and the wives of the senators, how they do "hone" for the home town and the home folks once in a while.

"He'll Run Again"

"It costs so much to live here," said the wife of a brilliantly successful public man the other day. "And you're always just a visitor. You never really belong and no one else does, either. You make friends with the wife of a congressman from down South, and just as you get acquainted with her and her likes and dislikes, and her funny little ways and her sweet, kindly impulses—and just as she is accustomed to your fads and follies and knows just how much you mean and just what you wouldn't mean for the world and how to take your different moods—she goes home to help her husband in his campaign. And he's defeated and doesn't come back, and—there you are looking all around for a new friend.

"We're all just pilgrims and strangers here in Washington. At first I thought it was lovely—all the receptions and parties and dinners, and visiting lists and the rest of it. I just love cabinet gossip and cabinet dinners, and I like to think that I know why Mrs. Who was a little cool to Mrs. What at the tea, and what made Mrs. Somebody a trifle overcordial to Mrs. Who-Is-It at the bridge game.

"But dear me! Now I'm so glad when I can take a night off and sit down at home with a book and go to bed at 9 o'clock and not have to dress and smile and look pleasant for three mortal hours for the sake of someone I never saw before and probably shall never see again.

"Husband? Oh, husband says he hates it, too! He's tired of it all—the wire-pullings and the juggling for place and the fights for power and the little schemes, and all the rest of it. But when his term is up he'll run again."

It Will Never Go

"He always does and, of course, I don't want him to be defeated—but, oh, for a few years back home with some old friends and nobody wondering what's back of my smile or my frown, or my attempt to be amusing when I'm bored to death!

"Display, policy—flattery, social ambition—I do wish I was through with them once and for all."

That's the way they all talk in Washington—and yet here they all are, season after season, just the same.

And in the summer when you go in from the porch and sit down to read and the bright-hued moth flutters after you—because of the light—and you try to drive it out to liberty and life, somehow it will never go—will it?

How like we are so many of us to moths.

This is annoying to me and I feel that it is an act of discourtesy to me. Although my husband himself does not do it he says it is quite all right for his brother to do so. What do you say about it?"

It is so usual for our busy husbands and fathers and brothers to read the paper over their breakfast, often because they feel that is the only time they have to do so, that it would be unfair to say that they are thereby doing us an act of discourtesy. However, I do agree with you that it is not very good manners. Where one does not have the excuse of reading the paper because it is the only opportunity to do so at breakfast then it is less pardonable than otherwise. If it is quite clear that the reading is simply actuated by curiosity and impatience then there is even less excuse for it. The fact is that with many families mealtime is the only opportunity for friendly leisurely intercourse and where one person chooses to put a damper on that spirit he is acting in a decidedly unsocial manner.

If a person breakfasts alone that is another matter. Then he may read the paper for companionship. So in a hotel restaurant when you occupy a table by yourself you are not showing bad manners; to do so though if you must eat at a table with other persons even if they are strangers to you, you are not showing very much politeness if you prop the paper up before you. The practice of paper reading has become so general at breakfast time that there are little metal paper props in the stores for which there is considerable demand, making it possible for one to eat undisturbed and have one's paper held at a convenient angle before him.

There is really no reason why one should not read a paper in the car or train though, of course, the courteous man or woman will contrive to hold the paper or magazine or book so that it does not annoy his neighbors or so that his elbows in holding it do not prod them. It is extremely discourteous to read paper or magazine at a lecture, or any performance. If this does not actually embarrass the performers it is the kind of thing that detracts from the enjoyment of the other members of the audience. And never, never read when some one is talking to you. To be sure, you may be able to attend to what is being said to you and sense what you are reading at the same time, but it is the sort of discourtesy that is almost never excusable.

Do you keep your rails all clear
For the Special trains of Cheer?
Are your trains of Sympathy
Running through from A to Z
With no side-tracks to delay
Progress o'er the right of way?
Are the switches wisely set
Lest you detour to Regret?
Do your schedules give good heed
To the shadowed Land of Need—
And your Terminals today—

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 18, and I like a boy of 21. He lives out-of-town, and always sends me presents. On my birthday he gave me a wrist watch. We have been going together ever since we were children. Now, is it proper for me to take presents from him? While we are not engaged, he talks of it whenever we are alone. My parents like him, and he told them that if I didn't marry him he'd kill himself.

I have tested his love by making him jealous. He'd leave town whenever he saw me with a boy friend. He got me to care for him. We go out and have good times, and take mother along with us.

Please tell me if I am doing right in accepting presents from him, as he thinks of nothing else but the day when we are to be married.

LILLIAN.

LILLIAN: As a rule, it is not considered proper to accept presents from a young man unless you are engaged to him. But in your case, ask your mother what she thinks, because marriage has been spoken of, and under the circumstances she is, as always, the best one to advise you.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am desperately in love with a young man with whom I kept company for months. On account of a slight misunderstanding I did not see him for three months.

About a month ago he invited me out, and we were getting along perfectly, except for a girl whom he went with during those three months, who insists upon coming between us.

I have not seen him for a few weeks, but he was seen out with this other girl, whom he claims he does not like as well as me. How can I win him back?

BROKEN-HEARTED.

BROKEN-HEARTED: There is nothing you can do to force the attention or love of a man. When you see him, simply be yourself.

Unless you are engaged to the young man you have no right to object to his having other girl friends.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

"Everything About the House Helps to Make the Home"

By WANDA BARTON

Do You Save Time by System?

MONDAY is a busy and often a trying day for the housewife who has no assistants. If she could work in peace all would be well but it is collectors' day, the laundry man calls for the wash that goes out, small bill collectors come for their weekly bills, delivery boys arrive—there are a dozen and one interruptions—and the housework must fit in between times.

The wise housekeeper has filed all her bills and lists on her desk on Sunday and has a generous pocket in her morning apron or dress where her pocket-book is handy and where receipted bills may rest until she goes back to her desk to check them up.

After the dishes are done the refrigerator put in order and the day's meals are planned, her market list is ready. A tour of downstairs rooms will yield papers, trash baskets and the general wreckage left over from Sunday's rest. After this is removed, dusting and brushing-up are in order. All of these things should be attended to while the various interruptions are taking place for it is a trial to be called down from the upstairs work to answer the door.

A bell of distinctive sound placed on each outer door and on the dumb waiter saves steps. An upstairs extension to the telephone is another time and labor saver. A complete cleaning outfit of brooms, brushes, pail and so on for upstairs is also a boon to the busy woman, and a roll of stout paper bags in the cleaning-closet may be used for dust and trash, to save carrying down the dustpan, which is invariably forgotten, causing an extra trip.

Particular housekeepers have extra sets of cleaning-cloths so that a clean set is always available. "How foolish!" some women may exclaim, but those who understand realize that if dusting is to be done at all it should be well done, and only clean cloths will accomplish this. Dirt-clogged cloths smear wood surfaces and dust sticks to them after such treatment, where a fresh, clean cloth polishes the wood as well as removes the dust.

Floor-cloths should be boiled gently with any good soap powder in the water, well rinsed, dried, ironed, folded and put away. Dust-cloths should be treated in the same way. Oil-rags, if they are good flannel, or cotton flannel, should be shaken free of loose dust, then put to soak in hot water in which grease-dissolving powder has been placed. After soaking in two waters, they may be boiled out and dried and they will be serviceable again as good polishing cloths. It is expensive to be constantly buying new cloths and the supply from waste material on hand will not last if used carelessly.

A system once established in all these household matters, saves time, labor and waste. We never realize how much more easily the systematic household is run until we visit the other kind of home, or hear how it is mismanaged.

Every household labor-saving device is a waste of money if the housewife does not thoroughly understand its mechanics. She should know how to clean, oil, repair and keep it in perfect order or it will not do the work for which it was purchased and will become a delusion or cause endless repair bills for upkeep.

Even the homely carpet-sweeper, pioneer among household helps, should be cared for systematically. Its dustpans should be emptied twice a week and the brush cleaned of all threads, hairs and trash daily. This should be done by cutting them off with the scissors and the brush should be washed and sun-dried once in two months to do good work. Feather dusters should be carefully dipped in warm, soapy water and the feathers gently squeezed, then when clean, they should be rinsed well and hung in the sun to dry and fluff. Care should be taken not to break the feathers, but this bath doubles the life of the brush besides keeping it sanitary. If care is taken of commodities, the best in quality may be purchased with a clear conscience.

COTTON PRODUCING STATES CALLED TO ORLEANS MEETING

(International News Service)

Durham, N. C., Feb. 18—In response to a call issued by Governor Morrison, of North Carolina, representatives of all cotton producing states will meet in New Orleans on February 23 to discuss ways and means of relieving economic conditions in the South.

Such is the announcement made here today by R. O. Everett, a member of the general assembly of the state and chairman of the commission which will represent North Carolina at the conference.

Efforts to establish a cotton states agricultural bureau to study world demand for cotton as the manufacturer studies southern production in the spring and to stabilize prices of the staple is among the objects of the meeting.

That the situation is not merely an economic one, but a social one as well was pointed out.

FIGURES GIVEN ON POWER OF SHOALS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Hugh L. Cooper, engineer who designed Muscle Shoals, Ala., for the government today gave the following comparative figures to show the expense of the power possibilities of the Shoals property:

"There can be developed 571,000 horsepower. It would normally take care of the electrical wants of 3,000,000 people annually and would save 5,000,000 tons of coal a year. Chemical production possibilities at Muscle Shoals are beyond computation."

Annual Convention to be Held in Future

An annual instead of a biennial convention will be held by the General Federation of Women's Clubs in the future, with a biennial election of officers in "even" years. This change was one of the four by-law changes voted by the National Board at the January meeting in Chicago.

Fifth District News—Woman's Club Auburn.

Educational Department:

An unusually interesting meeting of the Educational Department of Auburn was held Thursday, January 19th at the home of Mrs. C. R. Hixon. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. S. D. Chestnut.

After roll call and reading of the minutes, the program was carried out. Mrs. Chestnut made a few preliminary remarks concerning the new work the department was taking up. The remainder of the year will be devoted to the study of "playgrounds, and it is the aim of the members of the Education Department to be able to provide some sort of a playground for, the children of Auburn. Mrs. Spright Dowell read an interesting paper on the "Playground Movement of America", giving in a general way the benefits of supervised play. Rev. Robert Miles, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Auburn, was present and gave a most instructive talk of his experiences as a play ground director. He has been assistant superintendent of playgrounds in Richmond, and he told of many wonderful changes that he saw take place in individuals, as a result of supervised playgrounds.

After the program some of the business was attended to. A notice from the district chairman of libraries concerning magazines to be sent to Dr. Brice's Hospital in Tuscaloosa, was read, and Mrs. J. T. Williamson was appointed to obtain more information regarding what was wanted.

The coming election was discussed each woman was urged to pay her poll tax before February 1st., and the chairman was requested to find out who were running for county offices and what each person stood for. The members discussed the advisability of accepting Prof. Thomas' offer regarding the Picture Show at the college. They decided they would get a good picture and put on a show Friday afternoon, February 3rd for the children. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the meeting.

Literary Department, Auburn

The November meeting of the literary department of the Woman's club met on the 29th with Mrs. Ben Wooten. The roll was called and minutes read. Mrs. Clark appointed a committee to choose a play which is to be presented at the open meeting in February. There being no further business, the first number on the program, a song by Mrs. McCleod, was enjoyed. Following this came the speaker of the afternoon, Dr. Taylor. His subject, "The Spoken Word," was presented in an interesting manner. Next Mrs. Wooten rendered a solo. This concluded the program and the meeting adjourned.

January meeting of the literary department took place on the 26th with Miss Elna Williams as hostess. Since the December meeting had been omitted that program was combined with the one for January. Mrs. Fortter was leader, her subject being Granville Barker. She discussed his work as a dramatist and read extracts from his plays. The last half of the program was devoted to this discussion of the February plays by Miss Martin. There being no more business the meeting adjourned.

Announcements

The Woman's club under the supervision of Mrs. Hardy, chairman civics and health; Mrs. Yarbrough, chairman ways and means; Mrs. Chestnut chairman education, co-operating with the college, served refreshments during mid-season dances, at the gymnasium, which lasted three days.

Vanishing Languages.

Nowhere in America has there been such a diversity of Indian languages as in California. But these languages are now rapidly disappearing. Several of them are known only by five or six, and others only by twenty or thirty living persons, and hardly a year passes without some dialect or even language, ceasing to exist through the death of the last Indian capable to speak it. Efforts are being made to record all these languages for the sake of the light they throw on the ancient history of the Pacific coast.—Washington Star.

Proves Wisdom of Hesiod.

The many prove the wisdom of Hesiod, who says that the road to wickedness is smooth and very short, and there is no need of perspiring; but before virtue the immortal gods have placed the sweat of labor and long and steep is the way thither, and rugged at first; but when you have reached the top, then, however difficult, it becomes easy.—Plato.

FAMOUS "WITS" OF HISTORY

Little Stories of Men and Women Whose Sayings Are Still Remembered

By MARK STUYVESANT

How Dr. Johnson Defended His Reputation as a Joker.

THE "great Dr. Johnson," the man who revised and compiled the dictionary as we know it, married a woman who had children as old as himself. She was called "the Widow Porter," and is described as having been a tittering, short, fat, coarse woman, with "a face full of paint." But Johnson adored her. She was witty, and, perhaps, in her wit lay her charm for him.

Johnson, however, alluded to her as "the pretty creature," although his biographers always remind the reader at this point that Johnson's eyesight was very poor indeed. He cared more for her opinion of his writing than for any other criticism.

When Johnson proposed to the Widow Porter he told her candidly that he had no money, and that his uncle had been hanged. She replied that she cared nothing about what any of his family had done, and that, although she had no relatives who had been hanged, she had fifty who deserved to be.

Unfortunately, "the pretty creature" died not long after they were married. Johnson's grief almost affected his mind. His illness, poverty, adversity, and finally the loss of his wife soured Johnson's temper, and in all of his wit there is a bitter, biting tone.

A Scotchman, proud of Buchanan's fame as a scholar, and as a tutor to Mary Queen of Scots, once asked Johnson:

"What would you have said of Buchanan had he been an Englishman?"

"Why," said Johnson, "said of him, sir? Why, I would not have said of him, had he been an Englishman what I will say now of him as a Scotchman, that he was the only man of genius his country ever produced."

During Johnson's lifetime there was a brilliant group of men in London who met regularly. Among them, to-day, represented poetry and literature in a light vein, Reynolds the arts, Burke political eloquence, Gibbon was the historian, and Garrick was the actor. In this brilliant group Johnson dominated and the club finally became known as "The Johnson Club." His conversation was more sparkling with these friends than at any other time. He expressed the reason for this by saying:

"They have the ability and knowledge to send back every ball I throw."

At one of the meetings of the club, Johnson made the statement that he disliked punning. He said:

"I hate a pun. A man who would perpetrate a pun would have little hesitation in picking a pocket."

"Perhaps you have no ability to play upon small words," remarked Boswell, who afterward wrote "The Life of Johnson."

"Sir!" roared Johnson. "If I were punished for every pun I shed there would not be left a puny shed of my punish head."

When the patience of Miller, the bookseller, had become exhausted at Johnson's delay in sending the final pages of the dictionary, he was one day delighted to receive them at last. He vented his feelings in the following:

"Andrew Miller sends his compliments to Mr. Samuel Johnson, with the money for the last copy of the dictionary, and thanks God he has done with it."

Dr. Johnson replied:

"Samuel Johnson returns his compliments to Andrew Miller, and is very glad to find (as he does by note) that Andrew Miller has the grace to thank God for anything."

He Told Her Candidly He Had No Money.

RELIEF ASKED FOR ALABAMA MINERS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, introduced in the house today a bill to appropriate directly $1,000,000 for relief of unemployed miners and their families in Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Mr. Bankhead said he had become impatient over the delay and as the bills of Representative Thomas and Robson, of Kentucky, are not being acted upon by the two separate committees to which they were referred, he decided he would so word his own measure that it would have to go directly to the appropriations committee

"That committee ought to decide quickly whether the money should or should not be voted to relieve the great distress in the coal mining section," said Mr. Bankhead.

The senate passed a bill which Representative McDuffie got through the house recently authorizing the state of Alabama, through its highway department to construct a bridge across the Tombigbee river.

SIX HOUR DAY AND FIVE DAY WEEK IS DEMAND OF MINERS

(International News Service)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 18—The convention of the United Mine Workers of America adjourned today after going on record in favor of the six-hour day and five-day week and a demand that the present wage scale be continued. This action followed rejection of the international scale committee's recommendation for an eight-hour day underground and a stormy debate on proposals ranging from a six-day to eight hours, bank to bank.

The convention also went on record as favoring an invitation to the anthracite and bituminous operators for a conference to draw up a new wage scale on April 1. It was decided that there should be no strike in the event of inability to reach an agreement with the operators, without a referendum vote of the miners being taken.

The 2,000 representatives of the half million miners of this country rejected the committee's recommendation that its scale report be substituted for all other wage resolutions offered heretofore.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

Here Are Five New Ways of Serving Eggs.

EGGS are always in season and when the home cook is in doubt, her mind naturally turns to them as a standard food. The freshest eggs always command good prices, but even at their highest they are cheaper than meats, and they run the gamut of soup, solid dish, salad and dessert as no other product can, excepting perhaps milk.

Egg Soup.

Beat two level tablespoonfuls of flour with two tablespoonfuls of stock until smooth, then add four well-beaten eggs. Have ready three pints of good stock, beef or chicken, pour in the egg mixture, stirring constantly while the soup cooks gently for fifteen minutes. Season with salt, pepper and a little mace. Serve with small toast squares.

Egg Moderne.

Boil six fresh eggs hard. Cool, peel and put the yolks through a ricer into a bowl which has been wiped with a bud of garlic. Chop the whites fine with six large olives and half a small red pepper. Fold in a small cup of mayonnaise made without mustard. Add a teaspoonful of onion juice, a teaspoonful of sugar and a half-teaspoonful of paprika. Spread sandwiches with the mixture in the usual manner. The mixture may also be used as a salad by serving it in cupped lettuce leaves.

Russian Omelette.

Make the usual five-egg omelette and when ready to fold have the following filling ready: Two tablespoonfuls of caviar, a small grated onion, a teaspoonful of melted butter, a half saltspoonful of red pepper, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and the stiffly-beaten white of an egg. Mix well. Spread the filling quickly, fold the omelette and set the pan in the oven long enough to brown the top. If the caviar cannot be managed, minced sardine or filleted herring roes may be used.

Ox Eyes.

Slice an eggplant in thick slices and boil in salted water for a few minutes, until tender when pierced with a straw. Lay the slices on a buttered baking-dish. Put six small muffin rings in a frying-pan, fill three-quarters full of hot water and add two teaspoonfuls of vinegar. When the water boils, break an egg into each ring and poach. Lift each egg, place on a slice of eggplant and dust with pepper and salt and a teaspoonful of grated cheese. Set in the oven long enough to melt the cheese, then serve. Cream or tomato sauce may be served if desired.

Egg Tontine.

Boil, cool and peel six eggs. Slice the eggs and lay over a dish spread with sliced tomatoes. Chop fine, a cupful of freshly cooked, cold string-beans and add with a tablespoonful each of onion juice and bacon fat to a half cupful of French dressing. Turn the dressing over all. Serve with cold meats.

Directors Decide to Hold Alternate Meetings of County's Farm Bureau

Sessions Will Be Held One Week In Hartselle And Next Week In Albany, The Board Says

A meeting of the board of directors of the Morgan county farm bureau was held Saturday morning in the rooms of the Albany chamber of commerce.

The meeting was presided over by President James F. Cain, with Howard L. Burleson as secretary. The first item taken up was a discussion of the permanent location of headquarters of the farm organization.

Ernest E. Mittwede, representing the Hartselle chamber of commerce, presented the first bid for the permanent headquarters of the organization in a resolution unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Hartselle chamber of commerce held Friday night. The meeting was then addressed by Carl D. Patterson, president of the Albany chamber of commerce who presented a bid for the permanent headquarters of the organization, on behalf of the Albany chamber of commerce.

A general discussion ensued in which the best of feeling prevailed in all of the discussions, and the entire proceedings were marked by an earnest desire to do the things that would redown to the very best interests in the very best way for what the organization stands for.

During the discussion the following took part: C. D. Patterson, Ernest Mittwede, P. P. Gilchrist, R. A. Burleson, L. C. Hill, J. B. Adams, W. B. Edmundson, and President J. F. Cain.

The following committees that were appointed at a former meeting made reports through their respective chairmen. The strawberry committee and crops committee, E. W. Bussey and L. C. Hill responding. These gentlemen read quite an exhaustive report on the findings of their respective committees, and were given further time.

Co-operation was stressed as the keynote of the organization, upon the faithful pursuance of which success would crown the efforts.

Before adjournment the board of directors took action on permanent headquarters, thanking Hartselle and Albany for the generous offers in providing a permanent headquarters for the farm bureau, but it was the unanimous decision that alternate meetings be held at each place, and that the county agent remain at Hartselle, where headquarters are already established.

A called meeting will be held at Hartselle next Saturday for the purpose of ordering fertilizer which order will be sent to the state organization at Montgomery and the order will come through that organization.

The following offers for permanent quarters were submitted by a delegation of citizens from Hartselle and Albany, respectively:

To the County Farm Agent and the Officers and Directors of the Morgan County Farm Bureau:

Gentlemen:—

In behalf of the Albany chamber of commerce, it is our esteemed privilege to welcome you as an organization to our county, realizing the great benefits the entire county will derive from the organization and the efforts of the farm bureau.

By a unanimous vote of our officers and directors, we extend your organization and the county farm agent, as a permanent place of meeting the following quarters, and ask that you consider them as permanent headquarters: An office room, 15 x 25 feet, well lighted and facing the main street; connected with this office by a door entrance, a kitchen equipped with every convenience for serving 100 persons; an auditorium with a seating capacity of 300. This room is equipped with chairs, tables, lights and heat.

These rooms are part of the quarters of the chamber of commerce and can be made larger or smaller as desired, by the use of folding doors. The entire quarters are lighted, heated and have all modern plumbing installed. You can use these rooms at any and all times without interference from any other organization or any other parties.

This building is located on the corner of Grant street and Second avenue in the business district and within one block of the L. & N. passenger station.

The chamber of commerce and business interests of this community extend to you the quarters as mentioned as a permanent home, free of expense.

Thanking you for your kindly and favorable consideration of our offer and assuring you that we stand ready to co-operate at any and all times in any development that it may be your pleasure to undertake, we are,

Yours very truly,
Albany Chamber of Commerce,
By C. D. Patterson, Pres.

To the County Agent and Officers and Directors of the Morgan County Farm Bureau:

Gentlemen:

In behalf of the Hartselle chamber of commerce, it is our esteemed privilege and pleasure to welcome you as an organization, to make Hartselle your headquarters.

By unanimous vote by the members of the Hartselle chamber of commerce we wish to extend to your organization, as a permanent place of meeting, the following quarters: Two large front rooms, well lighted, fronting Main street, adjoining city hall, also the city hall auditorium, with a seating capacity of 300; these rooms and auditorium are well lighted and equipped with necessary conveniences.

The city hall of Hartselle is located on Main street, in a few yards of the L. & N. railroad station, and being in the center of Morgan county, makes it convenient for all members, officers and directors to attend regularly their meetings.

Thanking you to kindly consider our offer as to location and convenience, and assuring you that the Hartselle chamber of commerce stands ready to co-operate at all times to further the interests of the Morgan county farm bureau, county, state and our glorious country, we are,

Very truly yours,

By E. F. Mittwede, Secretary.

Resolutions also were adopted, endorsing the offer of Henry Ford to take over Muscle Shoals. The resolutions were very much the same as those adopted at the mass meeting Friday night. The committee was composed of: F. A. Bloodworth, A. A. Hardage, J. M. Ratliff, W. B. Edmundson, H. L. Burleson.

Citizens Criticize Power Company

Detroit manufacturer, "and squirms around and gives the people no satisfaction," added the speaker.

Mayor Nelson

Mayor Nelson was received with applause as he came to the platform. He declared that the time for action had come. Referring to a published account of a recent speech of ex-Governor O'Neal, he advised that Mr. O'Neal, as he was an exceptionally forceful speaker, be asked to go to Washington and present the Ford proposals.

Mrs. W. B. Edmundson

"I think it is our own fault that the word of southern people carries no further at Washington," declared Mrs. Edmundson, and she advised that a 100 per cent vote be cast by every man and woman. "It is very curious to me," said Mrs. Edmundson, "that the Alabama Power company has been able to borrow so much money in the last week." (Applause.) In conclusion, this speaker declared that the consent of the governed must be considered and secured.

Judge Skeggs

The address of Judge W. E. Skeggs was a comprehensive one and well received. He referred to the unhappy experiences of this community on the night of February 15, when the Alabama Power company left the citizens in total darkness much of the time. He asked if any manufacturing concerns were being brought here by the Alabama Power company, and answered his own question with an emphatic 'NO'. The arms and might of labor were declared necessary to develop countries, and the crowd was asked if any of the bidders except Ford proposed to put thousands of men to work? Judge Skeggs made a vigorous attack on the public service commission of Alabama for ever recommending the leasing of the steam plant at Muscle Shoals to the Alabama Power company, and declared events in the last three months showed such action as very unwise, as the power company had not yet put the steam plant to work for the idle cotton mills as they claimed they would.

He declared that in his opinion all the movements made in this matter was "camouflage" to enable the power companies of the nation to get a hold on Muscle Shoals. This speaker mentioned alleged interests in the country and declared they were against Ford. "The money powers don't like him, because Ford has a system of his own they don't like," said the speaker amid applause. The speaker scored the government for not opening up navigation on the Tennessee river. Ford was declared to be the only man who could bring to pass the things possible from Muscle Shoals. The speaker closed with a stirring appeal, saying "We must demand of our officials, both state and national, that they not allow the good heritage God had given us to be taken away and exploited by a foreign corporation."

Judge Troup

Judge L. P. Troup was received with applause when he was called on by Chairman Rahm. He said he did not come there to abuse anybody or anything; "But I don't mind telling you confidentially," said the judge, "that I don't want the Alabama Power company to have anything in the world to do with Muscle Shoals." This expression was greeted with thunderous applause. Judge Troup gave a comprehensive outline of the whole Muscle Shoals proposition and declared that the best legal authorities said the Ford contract "was enforcible" and asked what else the government wanted. Ford had been manly and business-like and, especially as Weeks himself said, the Ford offer was the most comprehensive one made up to a few days ago.

As Judge Troup proceeded, he grew very convincing, and said the truth of the matter was that special interests were "against Henry, because Henry is what he is." Judge Troup was strong for demanding that every official, state and national, be made to take a stand on the Ford offer, as it was of such great magnitude. It was this speaker who insisted that Governor Kilby be sent to Washington to plead for the acceptance of the Ford offer— a suggestion that met with instant response and was embodied in the report of the resolutions committee.

Following the speech of Judge Troup a resolutions committee was named as follows: W. E. Skeggs, chairman; L. P. Troup, J. R. Daniell and H. O. Cline. While this committee was preparing to retire, D. C. Jones presented a set of strong resolutions, asking that the people be asked to "use oil lamps and to cut out gas and electricity" until the Alabama Power company withdraws their bid, or in some way supported the offer of Mr. Ford. These resolutions were referred to the regular resolutions committee. Mr. Jones made a well reasoned speech in support of his resolutions. Among others who spoke prior to the return of the resolutions committee, John A. Thomason made a deep impression. He said, speaking for Decatur, that his city had refused flat out to sign the latest contract offering of the Alabama Power company and that now whenever the city wants anything it is told that when it signed up it could get it. Mr. Thomason gave figures to show that the power company was making high charges and with preceding speakers asked what the people had to promise themselves if they gave that company and its associates the only remaining natural power site in the whole state.

Judge Skeggs read the report of the resolutions committee, and as he moved its adoption, George O. Chenault arose and asked that they be amended so as to direct that Governor Kilby be sent a copy, and Mr. Chenault was seconded by D. C. Jones and a number of others.

In behalf of the committee Judge Skeggs accepted the amendment. Chairman Rahm then put the amended resolution before the house, which arose enmasse adopted them with no dissent. Before adjournment H. P. Eagle was thanked for the use of the theatre, for which he made no charge.

The resolutions follow:

Be it resolved by the citizens of Albany-Decatur in mass convention assembled

1st—That we most heartily approve the proposition of Henry Ford for the lease of Muscle Shoals.

2nd—That we protest against any disposition to delay consideration in order to give the Alabama Power company opportunity to further befog the issue by any counter proposition.

3rd—That we request the immediate acceptance of Mr. Ford's offer as presented to congress by Secretary Weeks.

4th—That we urge our senators and the entire Alabama delegation in congress to use their utmost endeavor to procure speedy approval and acceptance of Mr. Ford's offer as presented.

5th That we request Hon. Thos. E. Kilby, governor of Alabama, to go to Washington at the head of a delegation of representative citizens to be appointed by him for the purpose of urging immediate action in this momentous matter.

6th—That copies of these resolutions be sent to Senators Underwood and Heflin and to each of the 10 congressmen from Alabama with the urgent request that they bepresented to the proper committees of the house and senate at once.

Respectfully submitted,
W. E. SKEGGS, Chm
J. R. DANIELL.
H. O. CLINE.

Only Difficulty He Found.

Her chief object was to make a fool of the latest fashionable philosopher. "Tell me," she cooed, "don't you find it a little difficult sometimes to write all those hard things about women?" The philosopher regarded her with impartial eyes. "There is a certain difficulty, madam," he replied; "but it is purely one of selection."

Legend, Brought Up To Date, Tells Indian Belief About Muscle Shoals

In their study of history, the class of the sixth grade of the Gordon school recently learned some things about Muscle Shoals, including the fact that General John Coffee and other Tennesseans bought land about the Shoals as early as 1818 and organized the Cypress Land company. The students learned also that land was sold to three ex-Presidents, including Jackson, Monroe and Madison.

Then Edward Thompson, a member of the class, brought the ancient legend of Muscle Shoals up to date in the following story:

In the beginning of the world, so the Cherokee Indians said, a beautiful water spirit, the Goddess of the Tennessee, was imprisoned by the Great Spirits beneath the rushing waves of Muscle Shoals.

Throughout the ages the Prince of Power of the Air hovered near whispering his love upon the perfumed breezes, or venting his despair in storm or tempest.

Although his beloved flashed back her smile and murmured tender secrets which only lovers could understand, she never could come forth from her hiding place. Just why she had been imprisoned the Cherokees did not explain, but they believed this to be true. They said the Prince of the Air and the Goddess of the Tennessee could never be united until there should appear a mighty magician, who, with the wave of his wand, could bring together the spirits of the water and the air.

Then, thought the Red Men, there would follow such a reign of peace and plenty upon the earth as had never been known before and we believe Mr. Ford will be the great magician who will wave this wand.

The iron safe in the postoffice was completely destroyed, the door being battered down, lock and combination and hinges being rendered useless.

PRINCESS THURSDAY
"Ladies Must Live"

The feature at the Princess Thursday will be "Ladies Must Live." Betty Compson, who made a great hit in "The Miracle Man" in which she played opposite Thomas Meighan, is the featured player in this picture. The story deals with the troubles of certain women who, since ladies must live, plan to make that living as easily as possible. In the development of this theme the genius of Mr. Tucker found its finest expression, the result being a picture of supreme interest and appeal to every film fan. Robert Ellis and Jack Gilbert have the two leading men's roles. The picture is based on the novel by Alice Duer Miller.

DELITE MONDAY
"Enchantment"

Have you a daughter of the "flapper" age whose ways are beyond understanding—who thinks the world was created for and around her—whom you love with all your heart but cannot quite comprehend?

Are you a "flapper" yourself? Admit it. It is the best age after all, for it is the one time in your life when you have a very high opinion of yourself. And do you find it hard to educate your mother and father? Don't they seem to you a little old-fashioned, a little behind the times?

Is your best girl a "flapper"? You may think this is the most unkind cut of all. It isn't, for she will not only grow out of it but while she is in it she is an adorable chatterbox who thinks herself as nice as you think her.

These are three of the "flapper" question that are the most interesting angles in present day life. All three viewpoints are presented and worked out in "Enchantment," which will be shown at the Delite Monday. Miss Marian Davies has the leading role, supported by Forrest Stanley, Toni Lewis, Edith Shayne, Arthur Rankin and Corinne Barker.

PRINCESS THEATRE MONDAY
"Lasses" White's Minstrels"

"Lasses" White, one of the most popular minstrel comedians before the American public comes to the Princess Theater at the head of his own company which is now on its second annual tour, the new organization being known as "Lasses' White's All Star Mistrels and it is said that it is truthfully an all star aggregation of talent.

"Lasses" has for years been a featured member of all the leading minstrel bands in the country and is now making a success at the head of his own organization. Born in the South and knowing the characteristics of the real southern darky, with a natural gift for mimicry and a keen sense of humor, he more nearly than any of the blackface performers is able to give a correct portrayal of the negro as he is known below the Mason and Dixon Line.

The promise is given that White will offer an entertainment in the field which he knows so well, that will be even better than the one he gave last season. Some of those who will be in the company numbering a half a hundred minstrel performers in addition to the star himself who positively appears at every performance are Slim Vermont, Charley Lane, Bobby Gossans, Roscoe Humphreys, Paul Cholet, Frank Long, Herbert Schulze, Nate Talbot, Robert Johnson, Norman Brown, George Milner, Restivo, Waldo Roberts, Edgar Buchanan, Warren Dungan, Thomas McCormick, Chester Wilson, Jack Long, Charles Nolan, Jack Hays, Vic Barrett and Joe Riley.

A feature will be made of the daily street parade which takes place at high noon, the band being under the leadership of Ernest Hatley.

Three Minute Journeys
By Temple Manning

WHERE EVERY MAN IS HIS OWN DISHWASHER.

IF any one wishes to see the simple life in its simplest form, he should go to Thibet, the cold country of Central Asia.

In Thibet there is no worry about fashions or changes of fashions. The costume of the Thibetan consists of a single garment, so that the act of dressing does not take up much time, thought nor energy. This garment lasts for years, so the Thibetans are saved worry on that score, too.

A Thibetan Wayside Meal.

In the north, the single garment is made of sheepskin. The wool is worn next to the skin. When the weather turns warmer—for it is never very warm in Thibet—they do not change the weight or material of their garb, but simply lay aside the upper part of it, and go about naked to the waist. Or, if one arm happens to be too warm, the Thibetan simply slips his arm out of the sleeve and lets it dangle carelessly at his side—like the jacket of a comic opera hussar.

In the southern part of Thibet, where the weather is not so cold, the natives weave the wool from their flocks of yak, and make the cloth into a single gown-like garment.

In the matter of food, the diet of the average Thibetan is not varied. It consists of barley meal and tea, so that not much energy or thought is required even to prepare the meals.

Housekeeping is, by these simple methods, reduced practically to nothing. Even the irksome bore of the dishwashing of the west is eliminated in Thibet. The housekeeper doesn't dream longingly of an electric dishwasher, and no girls leave home because they're tired of washing dishes—because there is no dishwashing in Thibet.

In Thibet, each individual carries his own dish with him. It is a wooden bowl. He carries it in his breast, inside his sheepskin or woolen garment. After he has finished eating a meal the Thibetan imitates Jack Spratt and "licks his platter clean." Then he carefully puts the bowl back into the bosom of his garment, where it rests until he needs it again for the next meal.

Keepers of Libraries.

Those who read many books are like the eaters of hashish. They live in a dream. The subtle poison that penetrates their brain renders them insensible to the real world and makes them the prey of terrible or delightful phantoms. Books are the opium of the Occident. They devour us. A day is coming on which we shall all be keepers of libraries, and that will be the end.—Anatole France.

State To Operate A Modern Dairy

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—Within six months Alabama will be the owner and operator of one of the most modern and best equipped dairies in the state. Announcement was made Saturday that Dr. C. A. Cary, state veterinarian; William F. Feagin, state warden-general; W. A. Darden, secretary to the governor, and Jesse Hearin, manager of the farm department of the Montgomery chamber of commerce, have gone to the Carolinas and Virginia for the purpose of purchasing 100 or more head of Guernsey cows which will be placed at the modern dairy now being completed at the state prison near Montgomery.

Fertilizer Sales Are Falling Off

(Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—Farmers are not purchasing fertilizers this year in as large quantities as last year, according to a comparative statement completed by W. E. Allgood, chief clerk of the state department of agriculture. Last year was a small one for the fertilizer business but unless trade becomes better there will be a greater loss this year.

Between October 1, 1920, and February 17, 1921, the sales of fertilizer were 1,424 tons greater in Alabama than they have been during the same period of 1921 and 1922. This fact was obtained through the records of fertilizer tags which were disposed of by the department of agriculture.

NEWS OF MOULTON
AND LAWRENCE COUNTY

MOULTON, Feb. 18—(Special)—John F. Yarbrough, county agent, has been transferred from Lawrence county to Colbert county as the result of the promotion of I. T. Quinn from Auburn to the position of commissioner of the department of conservation to fill the unexpired term of John H. Wallace, Jr., deceased. County Agent High, of Lauderdale, has gone to Auburn, Capt. Deal, of Colbert, to Lauderdale, and Yarbrough from Lawrence to Colbert. The farmers of Lawrence county experience a direct loss in the change unless a good man is sent to fill the vacancy. Mr. Yarbrough has been active as an agent and has just begun to see results from his agressive campaigns. As a citizen, both in local affairs and his church work, he has won the esteem of Moulton and surrounding country. He and Mrs. Yarbrough have taken active parts in the school work and every interest of the town. Mr. Yarbrough goes to Tuscumbia Monday to enter upon his duties there. Mrs. Yarbrough and little girl leave in a short time for their new home.

As county agent, Mr. Yarbrough has been in touch with the teachers of the county and the school officials promoting agricultural clubs and community fairs. He has lived in Lawrence county a little better than three years.

G. Henry Watson, of near Moulton, left Friday for Birmingham where he takes work with one of the leading dailies of the state. He has been spending a couple of weeks with his parents, east of town, after almost two years in study of journalism at Columbia. He went to Columbia two years ago after completing his course at the state university. Mr. Watson has numerous friends in and around Moulton, where his pluck and energy in going through the county high school won the admiration of all, and while in high school here he began his newspaper career by acting as local correspondent for a number of papers. This work he continued when at the university and during his summers' work in Albany and in Montgomery for leading dailies.

After delay of several months the Jumbo Poplar company, for some time with headquarters in Moulton, has begun shipment of a vast amount of poplar and other lumber from Hillsboro to points in Germany, by way of South Carolina seaports. The logs were bought up in the mountains south of Moulton, hauled here and sawed and last year were hauled to Hillsboro where it has been waiting shipment for several months. This is only another potential possibility of Lawrence county handicapped by lack of good roads. The lumber industry and farming as well stalled wagons along the road to Hillsboro, loaded or unloaded, and the poor teams that struggle daily through the mud are all petitioners for road advantages and development of the county.

The Lawrence county board of education meets in regular session Friday, February 24th, at Moulton for transaction of routine business and any matters that may be brought before it at this time. This is one of the four regular meetings of the board, the others being the last Friday in May, in September, and in November. It is expected that many trustees and patrons will attend this meeting asking for consideration in the building up of better school buildings throughout the county and the possibility of giving better educational advantages to the children of the more remote rural sections.

The temperature was lower early in the week throughout Lawrence county than at any time previous this winter. The rainfall added has hindered considerably the farm activities begun and the early daffodils and jonquills that had been emboldened to bloom early in the month are hanging with limp stems now.

A. W. Walker, county tax collector, is in Courtland and Town Creek on business today.

Miss Ora Devers, elementary school supervisor, has been among the Valley schools this week working out from Courtland and from Town Creek.

T. F. Almon was on business at Town Creek and Courtland early in the week.

Mrs. Alice McClure and her nephew, Charles Adams, have taken rooms with Mrs. Clara Stewart.

R. M. Young has been confined to his room during the week with a severe cold.

HENRY FORD GIVES OLD FASHIONED ADVICE.

In the March number of McCall's Magazine Henry Ford, appears with an interview in which he takes a very hopeful view of the rising generation. Replying to the question—"Are the young folks going pleasure crazy"?

Mr. Ford says: "Oh No, It is only a passing fever. Did you ever stop to think why young people are so eager to have a good time? It is because they crave experience and self expression. Life is new and strange and they are stirred by the spirit of adventure. After that has been satisfied to some degree, they settle down and lead healthy normal lives."

Mr. Ford advises that the young women of America are in the way of making the best homes and the best wives, and says that young men should seek to marry early. In reply to the question, would he advise a young couple to marry before owning a home Mr. Ford said "Why not? Two can work and plan better than one. And besides one of the pleasures of married life is in working and saving for a common object Buying a home on the installment plan has been the making of many a couple". In regard to how a young man may make himself efficient in the world of work and business, Mr. Ford says that too many young men are satisfied with just one line of the business and with routine work. "They do not get a broad view of the entire business", he said "Sometimes that is the fault of the employer, but that does not excuse the young man. Those who command attention are the ones who are actually pushing the boss. To be specific, get books and read up on the industry in which you are employed. If you are working in a bank, study banking. If you are selling clothing or dry goods, study the business from every angle. Get ready for a promotion before there is any actual vacancy. Be prepared for your opportunity when it comes. It pays to be ahead of your immediate job, and to do more than that for which you are paid A mere clock watcher never gets anywhere. Forget the clock and become absorbed in your job. Learn to love it. If you follow out these suggestions you will not have to ask for an increase in most instances.

"Books on almost any trade or occupation can be obtained at the city library, and there are all sorts of schools and night classes that can help you to obtain special training. There is absolutely no excuse for a man to remain ignorant or untrained in these days. All it takes is a few evenings a week and a set determination to win. Suppose, for a start, that you do your dead level best for just one day. Get on the job ahead of time, put your work through rapidly and thoroughly, cut your lunch hour a bit, and don't quit until a few minutes after quitting time. Try it for one day, just to see how it feels to deliver one hundred percent to your employer."

COST TO RE-ESTABLISH GENERAL LEE'S SCHOOL.

No figures are available as to the original income required to support the Robert E. Lee school of journalism, at the time he had it in operation, but to re-establish a single chair of journalism along the lines laid down by Lee, would cost as much as $100,000, according to estimates. In case a separate building should be erected the cost would be increased by at least $60,000 according to the same estimates. Because never before has the public been asked to contribute to a similar object—or at least to one just like the Lee Memorial, no definite fund has been asked for, although not less than $200,000 is hoped for and expected by the managers of the campaign. If sufficient funds are raised it is proposed that a printing plant will be erected and operated in connection with the school. It will require the sum of $1,000,000 to make the Lee Memorial school of Journalism "an out standing national institution," an accomplishment that should be attained later, if not at the present time. At any rate it is clear from the estimates, that there is no danger of too much money being offered for the great work. In this particular locality, contributions are coming in rather slowly, and in view of the fact that February 22nd is the day set to close the campaign, the Daily wishes to ask prospective donors to the Lee Memorial to send in their checks at their earliest convenience. Public account will be made of all gifts to the fund, and the money will be promptly forwarded to Dr. Henry Louis Smith, Secretary of the Campaign, to his address at Lexington, Va.

CONSIDER SERIOUSLY.

A country blessed as is Alabama, with all her natural resources of a character that is calculated to provide everything which her citizenship could possibly wish or desire, is unfortunate indeed when so many varying opinions are pulling asunder that which could be developed to the great interest of all her people.

They should come together as one man; intent solely upon evolving a process out of which would spring the greatest good for the greatest number of her citizens. In this age when there are those who would throttle agencies that have for their end the great development of great natural resources of this state, there ought to be some way originated and brought into action that would eliminate that which is of a doubtful character, and adhere to that which bears the stamp of genuine sincerity with ability to put it over and have it function. This decision could be arrived at fairly well by studying the past record of they who would come into possession of these rich treasure houses which nature has so lavishly blessed Alabama with.

It would be almost a crime against the future citizens of this commonwealth who cannot now speak for themselves, if any other disposal of her power houses of wealth should be so carelessly considered and bartered away, as to cause them to lose the great benefits that nature has provided, awaiting the harnessing power of man's ingenuity.

Those in authority should think seriously and soberly before they delegate all the authority they possess as the people's representatives, into the hands of others, and when too late, suddenly come to the realization that the goose which layed the golden egg has been killed.

MUSIC IN THE HEART.

Great is the power of music and song. How often is it the case that the words of an old song have awakened the slumbering chords of the heart and memory mellow with the thoughts of the time when you heard it come trooping back and one lives over again the scenes of that time. It has sung people into the kingdom of God. It has spurred to activity when the load was heavy and given new zeal for the duties of the day. It has soothed the mind of the tired child and eyelids close to sleep under the entrancing melody of the lullaby that none but a mother can sing. It has brought comfort to hearts that were bereaved, and lighted up the avenue of hope when its star was most dim.

It has cheered the deary soldier on the field of battle amid the rattle of musketry and the roar of artillery. It has often proved the only companion to the wounded as the strains of martial music came above the din of battle, and as the spirit went out, the soft cadence of some melody went with it.

Many catch it in the sighing of the pines as the fanned by the soft zephyrs of a summers evening. It is heard in the roar of the cataract that thunders down the mountain side. The song birds that tune their throats along the green banks of th streams of our Southland, warble forth and unending melody of praise.

Music is everywhere; and they who are attuned in unison to catch its entrancing strains, live constantly in an atmosphere of hope, and love, and joy.

HOG INDUSTRY GROWS.

That the hog industry is growing by leaps and bounds in the State is no longer mere conjecture. Recently there has been noted many carload shipments of hogs coming from the southern counties of the State, Morgan county has not as yet profited to a great degree, in the hog industry, most of the raisers of the county being satisfied with just enough to make their bacon. Some very fine hogs have been raised in the county. With the large corn crops that we are able to raise in this section and the fact that practically all kinds of clovers do well here, would stamp this as a fine section to grow hogs for shipment. Some one will fall on the plan some day, and then every one will wonder why the idea never obtained before.—Albany-Decatur Daily.

The corn-eating hog is a perfect offset to the cotton-eating boll weevil in Alabama. He costs less money and energy to raise, on the whole is healthier than cotton, and generally sells as readily. Hog-growing is the best sideline for the average farmer.—Montgomery Advertiser.

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS FOR SABBATH AND OTHER DAYS

By J. E. Blair

We call the eye the "window of the soul"; the ears are its listening posts—but the human voice is the soul in action. John the Baptist suggests the magnitude of the voice in human and divine relations, when he speaks of himself as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness". The voice is the most revealing, the most personal power of the soul. It is the vehicle for words—and thought itself cannot be made articulate without the use of the voice, or what for a time may take its place. The voice is like a shuttle; it weaves the whole fabric of our human understandings and relations It speaks from the inner man to the inner man. It sets in motion never ending influences—the range of its power knows no bounds. Recently the Creator wrought through certain human agencies, inventions that will send the human voice after a fashion to the uttermost parts of the earth. There is a deep purpose and significance in this—it is a tribute to the power of the voice. The voice gives forth and arouses great potential abilities. It may bless or condemn, quiet or inflame, illuminate or darken the understanding, instruct or misinform, benefit or injure!

It is not our words, or even our thought that move individuals and multitudes—it is our very personalities, operating by means of our voices

Nothing save one's personality can move another personality, and then only as the voice is used. They talk of sermons by wireless; but watch and see how many "listeners in" fall down and ask to be saved at the sounds of the preacher's "canned" metalic voice. It was the personally present voices of Paul and Silas in the prison, that caused the jailor to call out—"men and brethren what shall we do to be saved?"

Mark Antony, in his funeral oration over dead Caesar, used this same expression all the way through—"And they are honorable men." At first he used it in praise, but at last he used the same words in sarcasm and to blame, and to brand the slayers of great Caesar as murderers. You recall that, almost, "the voice of Jacob," gave him away before dying Isaac, despite the trickery of Rebecca!

Every day we hear—"It was not so much what he said, but the way he said it". Again the voice is a member that cannot lie, words may lie and figurers do, but your voice tells just what you are.

Oh, there are attempts to deceive with the voice—but they are futile. Back of a beautiful voice is a beautiful character—back of a harsh voice is a bad unreliable character. Save the cross itself, there is not another so great a power for good as the human voice. If the voice be quite and gentle, in speaking God's love, it suggests the true character of the Creator and that he does His work quietly, and in the inner recesses of the soul. He uses the still small voice—not bluster and noise. The divine voice is not heard because of its mightiness, but because of the mighty patience and love back of it.

It has been said that every possible necessity of a man's life, except the water he drinks and the air he breathes, may be supplied either directly or indirectly through the use of petroleum products, and even water may be pumped by a gasoline engine.

Foot-binding, which resulted in women having feet so small as to be practically useless, has been discontinued in enlightened China.

In the Cambria coal field of Wyoming small quantities of gold and silver are said to be present in the coal veins. In South Africa a similar occurrence has been noted, the coal occurring in seams running through the quartzite ore.

Many Articles Marketed Here

On the streets of the Twin Cities Saturday the following products were being marketed: cross ties, beef cattle, axe handle timber, stave timber, lumber of various kinds, many products of the farm, including sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, chickens and eggs, butter, and various other articles. This emphasizes strongly the great resources of this county and would augur anything but poverty.

Railroad Briefs About Town

Meeting of Large Committee

The full committee of Safety First at the shops held its regular monthly meeting recently and with Chairman Matthews presiding, a number of suggestions were made calculated to aid the safety movement. Cecil Vantrease for the blacksmith shop suggested some improvements, as did T. H. Burman, of the boiler shop, S. C. Adel of the machine shop, D. D. Bagley of the coach carpenters, and J. E. Speer of the sheet metal workers, all of which were referred to the proper authorities. Chairman Matthews then read the reports of the accidents at the Albany shops for the month of January, which showed 81 accidents. The chairman then advised the members of the committee how unsatisfactory this report was and that something must be done to remedy matters. He urged upon every one the necessity of prompt action and full co-operation. He said that a plan was on foot to make March of this year "accidentless," so far as the local shops are concerned. Mr. Pilling gives the following poem: "Shall the Children ask in vain?"

Oh. Why don't daddy come home?
Suppose daddy never comes!
Suppose the anxious waiting moments
Are turned into an unbroken vigil of days, months, years!
Could a million dollars' insurance erase the yearnings of the little troubled heart?
Could all the great lawyers in this land make them understand when with their anxious face turned up to meet the tear-dimmed eyes of their mother, they ask:
Why don't daddy come home?

As he has not yet gotten a magna box, one child at a time was the rule. Solos, duets and choruses were distinctly heard by the children, greatly to their pleasure.

Local Boys Hopeful

Two local boys are hopeful about Ford getting Muscle Shoals—Messrs. T. B. Huddleston and Prince Putnam.

Putnam, until the war, was an employe of the shops, but during the war and until recently has lived in Sheffield. "I know that the most well informed people in Sheffield are absolutely confident Ford will still win," said Prince.

"One banker there who has large interests away from Sheffield, said that he made frequent trips to Washington, and that sentiment there was coming stronger for Ford all the time."

T. B. Huddleston said he was recently in touch with Florence and Sheffield people and that they are informed from Washington that a majority of the lower house is already pledged to vote Ford the victor, despite the three or four other offers made of late, including that of the Alabama Power company.

Muller, Pensacola, vice chairman; E. R. Powers, Covington, Ky., secretary-treasurer. The electrical workers and blacksmiths elect by referendum.

Robert speaks of having Harry Nelson, general chairman on the M. C. & St. L., at the convention, and that the delegates have enjoyed his talks. He closed by saying: "With best regards to you and the rest of the boys."

Turning Land Around Hanceville

Charles Frohoff, whose family resides in Hanceville, says the people are going right ahead turning land and building farm houses. He said that J. W. Clopton, of Decatur, was at Hanceville some time ago, and greatly interested the people in raising more butter and milch cows, and that the people were fast giving up the idea of cotton as the main crop.

Charlie said that his saw mill at Hanceville had considerable work to do cutting the framing for farm buildings.

Four More Stills In Toils Of Law

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—Four stills having a capacity of 1600 gallons each were destroyed in Lee county five miles from Salem by state and county officers Thursday night. Report of the successful raid was received by the law enforcement department by telephone.

Information about the operation of the stills was received during the morning but deputies who were in Montgomery were witnesses in the circuit court and could not go to Lee county until night. The operators of the stills were able to complete the run and remove the liquor before the officers arrived. When the stills were located the boilers were still hot, indicating that they had been in full operation during the day. No arrests were made.

Two stills of 400 gallons capacity each were taken in Shelby county in a raid conducted by state and federal officers. Three persons were arrested on charges of operating the stills and 27 1-2 gallons of liquor were taken as evidence. Three thousand gallons of mash was poured out.

JUDGE WARNS COPS TO BE POLITE TO AUTOISTS

(International News Service)

CHICAGO, Feb. 18. — "Ah, madame, it grieves me so to ask you to report at headquarters! But the law, it must be enforced; and you, madame, have released too much fuel with that exquisite foot of yours; your motor is traveling at a speed greater than that permitted by the laws of our fair city."

This may be the way Chicago traffic policemen will address violators of city traffic regulations hereafter. An order has been issued from the court wherein speeders and other violators of traffic laws are reprimanded and fined, instructing the policemen to "lay off the rough stuff" and treat violators "decently."

"Cursing by officers is a common complaint," declared Judge John R. Newcomer, who released Sylvester Brennan, who resisted arrest because the police used profane language.

"Arrests should be made decently and those arrested brought into court in a gentlemanly manner."

SKEGGS EXPLAINS SENATOR'S STAND

The following card was issued Saturday by Henry A. Skeggs, United States marshal for the northern division:

Albany-Decatur Daily:

In answer to rumors being circulated in this section, I desire to say that Senator Underwood, in Washington, the latter part of December, in talking about the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals, said to me that he was for the Ford offer, and that he would use his best efforts to have Secretary Weeks present it to congress in a favorable light and that when it was presented to the senate he would do every thing he could to pass it in the senate, and that he had no doubt that he would be successful as he had never lost a fight in the senate for Muscle Shoals.

Respectfully,
H. A. SKEGGS.

ONE MAN KILLED 2ND KIDNAPPED

(International News Service)

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Feb. 18—With one man shot and seriously wounded and another in the hands of kidnappers who ambushed the pair early today, the town of McKlenney, county seat of Baker county, today was on the verge of a feudal war.

Jake Wilkinson is in a serious condition from a gunshot wound and William Williams, formerly of Milton, Fla., was kidnapped. Appeals have been made to the sheriff of Duval county for assistance and Governor Hardee will be appealed to for military aid to quell disorders which are said to be growing serious.

Wilkinson and Williams were waylaid this morning by a band of six masked men, according to reports to the sheriff's office here. Wilkinson was shot down and Williams was carried away. The attack is believed to have been carried out by adherents of T. R. Henderson, local merchant, who disappeared last week and whose body is believed to be lying at the bottom of St. Mary's river near McKlenney.

Capital Hears Rumor of Petition To Call Extra Session of Legislature To Deal With the Shoals Situation

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—Entry of the Alabama Power company into the list of bidders for Muscle Shoals has caused Alabama to perk up and prepare to watch a fight of a magnitude seldom seen in this state, according to indications at the capitol following the submission of the company's bid to the secretary of war.

Friends of Henry Ford's offer have already started the fight in opposition to the Alabama Power company. The Montgomery chamber of commerce and the Alabama farm bureau federation have already adopted resolutions opposing the offer of the Alabama Power company and urging congress to accept the Ford proposal.

Information reached the capitol today that citizens of the Muscle Shoals section proposed to continue to stand by the Ford offer and to stand by it to the end, going as far as to urge Governor Kilby to call an extra session of the legislature for the removal of certain exemptions granted to the power companies in the past. This information which came from Florence was to the effect that a petition was in course of preparation which called upon the governor to assemble the legislature without great delay for the purpose of taking such action as would aid in the fight for the acceptance of the Ford offer.

This has recalled to the minds of state officials and legislators a message of Governor Kilby to the legislature during the closing days of the special session of 1921 which urged that power be given to the governor, as the representative of the state, to join in the proper movement for the disposition of the government's holdings at Muscle Shoals to the interests which would develop them for the benefit of the state and nation. This message was followed immediately by a resolution granting this authority to the governor.

Friends of the Muscle Shoals development in the legislature opposed the resolution, expressing the fear that it would have the effect of deterring the development rather than enhancing it. After several conferences, Governor Kilby reached the conclusion that if the friends of the development did not want the plan he would not insist upon it. The resolution was allowed to die on the calendar of the house.

WOMEN OUST BARBERS AND OTHERS FROM JOBS

(International News Service)

SEATTLE, Feb. 18—Encroachment of women in jobs formerly occupied by men is shown in a report just issued by the Seattle chamber of commerce.

In 1920, in the state of Washington there were 581 women barbers, hairdressers and manicurists; 48 women fishermen and oystermen; 7 women draymen, teamsters and expressmen; 5 women longshoremen; 24 women laborers in shipyards; 261 building laborers; 233 sawmill and planing mill laborers and 53 lumbermen, raftsmen and woodchoppers.

Avoid Staleness.

You can avoid staleness if you have will power enough to assert yourself. Like the fabled hero of the ancients who grew stronger every time an adversary threw him to the ground you can "come back" if you go to mother earth. Get out into the open. Go to the streams where the fishes play. Climb the hills where you will be compelled to pant good air into the lower lungs. Chase the wild things of the forest and then try to outdo the thunders with unrestrained hallloes and see what nature will do for you. There's something in the careless abandon of nature that puts fitness into the whole man.—Grit.

CLARA MORRIS TELLS ABOUT Life-Preservers for Shut-Ins

BREAD is the staff of life
The young lions do seek their meat from God.

THESE sayings are accepted by the unfortunate "shut-ins" who add to them—"books are life-preservers."

And since amusement is a necessity of human existence, we do seek our laughter in the oddities, aversions, even weaknesses of the authors of life-preserving books.

That sounds ungrateful—but really it is not. You fortunate ones who are free to go and come, have the open world, to seek amusement in, while the "shut-in" poor prisoner of pain must accept such entertainment as offers itself in the confined and arid atmosphere of the sick-room. That's why we are driven to have fun with our authors. Without degenerating into malice, there is a touch of mockery in many of us that makes us keenly enjoy a wee "laugh in the sleeve" at the expense of our betters.

Sometimes the very young teller of a story becomes so anxious as to the effect he is producing, that we can fairly see his perturbed worried face between the lines, and are heartlessly gleeful thereat.

"It's the Rooster"

It is amusing, too, to note how much beside the story, authors put between the covers of their books. Certain bits of autobiography will appear and reappear in this novel or that.

The "shut-in" finds it fairly easy to identify the pet word of even a strange author when he uses it in season and out of season. Showing himself morbidly dependent upon it still a writer often so fascinates and entrances you that he "gets away" with the trick phrase or catch-word, without getting on your nerves.

One favorite authoress of today is fairly obsessed by the word "oddly." In one book I found the word once in every chapter, twice in fifteen chapters and three times in three chapters.

"The sun had set oddly in"—a man was "oddly moved"—she was "oddly erect—oddly sad—oddly elated—something oddly enticing—" and so on ad libitum."

A certain best seller of other days worked his best word "presently" to the limit. "Presently the curse fell—presently she kissed him—presently the glove was fastened—presently all will be clear to us there beyond the grave."

It was like Carlyle and the dead rooster. The mighty one had not written a line in a week. The oatmeal and tea were both out. Mrs. Carlyle reproached him.

A Book Appeases Hunger

"It's the rooster crowing," he growled.

"But they killed him to oblige you."

"Aye and what of that? Ye ken well I canna writen when I'm expecting the creature to crow any moment."

The one word that can claim to be a nation's fad is the hateful "odious." In the seventies there was a great run on German novels—and their pages were positively peppered with "odious, odious"—but odious is forgotten now.

A powerful new man is betraying an unseemly fondness for the jarring word "prognathous." His friends should place him under observation at once. He is well worth saving, but they should act quickly.

"Shut-ins" know how hard it is to cure the pet-word addict. Recall "solitary horseman James" and his gloomy statement, "It has taken me thirty years to produce a book without a solitary horseman in the first chapter."

So, you see, books are our life-preservers, since to the "shut-in" a book is the only thing that can appease the hunger it awakens.

ASK INFORMATION ABOUT ALABAMA

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—The dozen or more Iowa farmers want to bring their families to Alabama and locate, according to the weekly summary today issued by the state bureau of markets and immigration.

H. Murphy, of Waverly, Iowa, made particular inquiry about the section surrounding Muscle Shoals.

J. D. Shunck, of Columbiaville, Mich., requested information about the coastal plain section of Alabama and said he is particularly interested in the advantages for the growing of pecans.

G. T. Davis, of Carlyle, Mont., requested reports on Alabama farming opportunities.

M. J. O'Kafe, 275 West 39th St. New York City, sought information about the South, saying he desires to get a start in farming and desires information about the public lands open to homestead.

F. H. Nodine, of Chester, N. J., also inquired about farming lands open for homestead in Alabama.

F. E. Clare, 1122 N. Harris St., Hanford, Calif., requested data regarding Alabama agriculture, especially fruits, vegetables and dairying.

Raymond Hart, 17 Jefferson St., Newark, N. J., an ex-service man, inquired about government lands open to homestead, saying he is particularly interested in southern farming opportunities.

NUMBER OF FARM ANIMALS IS LESS

Montgomery Bureau, Albany-Decatur Daily)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Feb. 18—An alarming decrease in the number of farm animals in Alabama and a violent decrease in the value of farm animals are shown in the annual livestock report for Alabama made public Saturday afternoon by F. W. Gist, agricultural statistician for the federal and state departments of agriculture, following confirmation from the Washington office of the bureau of markets and crop estimates.

The total value of animals on farms January 1, 1922, was $72,496 000 compared with $90,296,000 January 1, 1921, and $129,943,000 January 1, 1920. The total value of livestock products consumed in the state during 1921 did not show such decrease, being $80,898 000 in 1921, $98,951,000 in 1920 and $95,088,000 in 1919. The latter showing is attributed by Mr. Gist to the increase in the production of chickens, milk and eggs, the prices of which did not show as heavy a decrease as those of meat products.

The total numbers of horses estimated on farms in 1922 was 130,000 compared with the same number in 1921 and 1920. Other comparisons for the three years follow: Mules—1922, 299,000; 1921, 302,000; 1920, 296,000; milk cows—1922, 506,000; 1921, 496,000; 1920, 491,000; other cattle—1922, 515,000; 1921, 536,000; 1920, 554,000; broad sows, 1922, 220,000; 1921, 223,000; 1920, 229,000; other hogs—1922, 1,037,000; 1921, 1,124,000; 1920, 1,268,000; sheep—1922, 83,000; 1921, 79,000; 1920, 82,000; chickens—1922, 6,027,000; 1921, 5,901,000; 1920, 5,919,000.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE
By Genevieve Kemble

Sunday's horoscope is not a very important one, according to the lunar transits. It should be a good day for correspondence, study and literary pursuits, as well as for giving some attention to the health—which may be menaced.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of activity in business and professional pursuits, especially as they have to deal with writings, papers, etc. A child born on this day may be clever, talented and versatile.

Monday's astrological map points to rather unsettled and restless conditions, with certain anxieties of a financial nature. There may be losses through extravagance or undue generosity. In social and domestic affairs there may be interesting developments, and in affairs of the heart certain sensational testimonies are apparent. Unconventional or eccentric behavior may be conspicuous.

Those whose birthday it is have the forecast of a successful year, particularly if in the employment of others, but perhaps with a desire for change, which may well be shunned. A child born on this day may be restless, unsettled and erratic unless carefully trained in early life, but may be generous and affectionate.

Lifted Horizons.

While all melts under our feet, we may well grasp at any exquisite passion, or any contribution to knowledge that seems by a lifted horizon to set the spirit free for a moment, or any stirring of the senses, strange dyes, strange colors, and curious odors, or work of the artist's hands, or the face of one's friends.—Walter Pater, in The Renaissance.

Daily Thought.

The things which must be must be for the best.—Owen Meredith.

A Seat A Couch

A Surprise Bed!

There is no more useful piece of furniture made than the Bed Davenport. It is used in TWO WAYS; it serves THREE purposes.

One way it is a stylish, up-to-date davenport; a comfortable seat for three, a delightful couch.

The other way is a surprise; you lift the seat and you have a bed—full-size, roomy, comfortable.

The ease with which davenport is changed to bed is surprising. A gentle pull—a simple turn—over goes the seat and up comes the bed construction. Action is silent, sure and easy, so perfectly balanced is the folding steel bed frame. What is more, mattress and complete bedding—on resilient springs—are in place, all spread out ready to sleep on when bed is opened.

You can obtain from our stock a Bed Davenport that will match your present living room furniture or one with chairs to match in ideal living room suites.

Does Sciatica Make You a Cripple?

Does Sciatica make you a cripple, unable to get out of bed? Or is your case a mild one that merely makes moving around a misery and pain a constant companion? In either event you are unable to work or think, and you are making others suffer with you, for that is the law of life.

Sciatica is a form of neuritis or neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. It may be present without either liver or kidneys being inactive. In this respect it differs from rheumatism, which is always accompanied by costiveness and kidney trouble. Sciatica is caused by pressure on the sheath of the sciatica nerve and this pressure causes an inflammation and swelling of the sheath, which compresses the nerve and causes the constant pain which is the characteristic of this disease. For three years I have been relieving sciatic sufferers here in th Twin Cities.

ONLY ENGLISH-BORN MAIDS WILL ESCORT MARY TO ALTAR

By F. A. WRAY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 18. — Only English-born maidens will follow Princes Mary to the altar when she marries Lord Lascelles on February 28. Three cousins and five of her personal friends have been chosen.

Princes Maud, her first cousin, and daughter of the Princess Royal and sister of Princess Arthur of Connaught, will be the chief bridesmaid. She is very shy and little known to the general public. A rather plump girl, with masses of curly hair, Princess Maud will be acting as royal bridesmaid for the second time. The previous occasion was the wedding of Princess Patricia, daughter of the Duke of Connanught.

Lady Victoria May Cambridge is another first cousin of Princess Mary, being the daughter of Queen Mary's eldest brotner. She is a very pretty girl, with a rose leaf complexion and fair golden hair. Her younger sister also married oustide the royal family, her husband being Major Gibbs.

Lady May Cambridge is the schoolgirl daughter of Princess Alice and the Earl of Athlone. She also is very fair, with beautiful coloring. She is extremely self-possessed and has acquired out-and-out democratic sympathies at her boarding school.

One Bridesmaid Is 14

Lady Diana Bridgeman is another very young bridemaid, being in her fourteenth year. She is the eldest daughter of the Earl and Countess of Bradford and therefore a cousin of Lord Lascelles. About eighteen months ago there was published a book of verses, written by her when still in the nursery, which were considered to be of extraordinary promise. Since then she has written several other volumes.

Lady Rachel Cavendish was always regarded as certain to be one of the chosen. She is one of the five daughters of the Duke of Devonshire and popular expectation looks to the early announcement of her engagement to the Prince of Wales. Her mother has always been the closet and most valued friend of Queen Mary, and it was at Chatsworth, the magnificent mansion of the Duke, that the acquaintance of the Princess and Lord Lascelles ripened into an engagement. Lady Rachel is also a typically fair English girl and is a great sportswoman and keen dancer into the bargain.

Lady Doris Gordon Lennox who has also been discussed as a possible bride for the Prince of Wales, is the daughter of the Earl of March and one of Princess Mary's closet personal friends. She is just twenty-five years of age and prefers to live her life in the country rather than in London.

Lady Mary Thynne was regarded as last year's prettiest debutante. She is a daughter of the Earl of Bath and a girl of keen individuality as well as being an ardent student. She also is in Princess Mary's complete confidence.

Lady Elizabeth Bowes - Lyon daughter of the Earl and Countess of Strathmore, is probably the bridesmaid most likely to make her mark on English society in the next few years. She is a very vivacious, enterprising girl who does all the entertaining for her mother. Last fall she suddenly made up a party of young people and motored them a hundred miles over the Scotch moors in order to see Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid." She and Lady Diana Bridgeman are the only two dark bridesmaids chosen.

ATTENTION

EVERYBODY is cordially invited to call at the booth of the Fuller Brush Co. at the Industrial Exposition and inspect the most extended line of brushes ever put on exhibition here. Brushes for the home, adapted to every conceivable use. They have the quality and will save time and labor, besides doing the work more thoroughly than by old obsolete methods. I will be in personal charge and will be glad to see you. Tul Worley. 17-3

PRISONER WHO FEARED VERDICT FALLS DEAD

(International News Service)

BERLIN, Feb. 18—Fear of death has killed a prisoner at the Berlin criminal court.

Franz Hoppe, a business man, was charged with murdering and robbing a woman resident of Konigwesterhausen. While the jury gave their verdict in the absence of the prisoner, in accordance with German custom, Hoppe eargerly listened from his cell close by. He thought he heard the words, "We find the accused guilty of murder."

Hoppe was brought into court and stood, pale and trembling, as the judge began: "You are found guilty of——"

At that moment Hoppe murmured, "I know" and fell dead.

As a matter of fact, the jury only found him guilty of manslaughter.

MICE CATCHING SCHOOLS OPENED FOR KITTENS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—"Make your cats useful. I'll train them to be adept at catching mice and rats."

That's the word a local clothing manufacturer passed among his friends after he discovered two parent cats in his factory teaching their offsprings the rudiments and also the higher arts of the profession of "mousing." Mice were found to be destroying thousands of dollars' worth of clothing material.

The result is a thriving training school for cats, where no entrance examinations are given and no tuition fees are charged. The classes are always filled.

The two original members of the "faculty" have become senile and of little use for teaching purposes.

PAY OF DEATH DEALER DROPS AT SING SING

(By International News Service)

OSSING, N. Y., Feb. 18. — Ninteen twentysone- was a poor year for State Executioner John Tulbert. His income fell off $750 from the previous year, when he had sixteen electrocutions. Last year he had only eleven.

For each person he puts to death in the electric chair Hulbert gets $150. In addition to these fees he draws a salary of $1,500 for serving the State in another capacity.

Prospects are for a more prosperous year for Hulbert in 1922. So far this year he has had three jobs. Three other men are to be executed soon, and twenty-five condemned men are now in the death house.

Spring Fashions Are Discussed By Buttrey, Just Back From New York

The word Spring will soon be on the lips of all followers of fashion and with this magic word comes the thoughts of "what is new." As already the foremost American designers have corroborated with the famous foreign fashion criterions and have created some wonderful ideas, and from this malestrom of style have emulated some smart and striking styles in Spring apparel. And so in the initial showing of these, milady may expect to see some very beautiful and charming creations. Thanks to the thoughtfulness of Mr. Buttrey of Buttrey's Department Store who has just returned from New York making his purchase for Spring. We are able to present to our lady readers a brief outline of what they may expect to see in our local shops shortly.

Our cloth manufacturers have helped towards the new fashions considerably by developing many new materials such as Pandoras, Wondoras, Shausheen new novelty Eponges and Spongeens and the newer weaves in Piquetines, Needle Twills, and Cords also fine weaves in Tricotine and Poirets.

And then also are the recent developements in sport materials such as the Johny Walker cloth, the Kelley cloth, Snow Flake, Herringbones and fancy Bannockbournes and Donegals.

All these fabrics have been produced in new beautiful shades such as Orchid, Fuchia, Canna, Tangerine, Cinder, Snuff and Lady bird as well as the conventional Navy and Black. These all tend to make the styles for Spring more diversified then ever before.

The plain taileur of long lines in fine twills is again in vogue or those that care or this style garment but n addition to this we have the newer models in box suits with their variations—the flare loose back suit and with fancy braids of many descriptions.

Then again we have the town and country suit made in beautiful Tweeds and mixtures and in these suits we have an innovation brought to us. The knickerbockers, which dame fashion predicts a great future for. These suits are all made in three pieces so that if mfady tires of knickers she also has the separate skirt to wear with her jacket. Many of these suits are produced in smart mannish lines and are the real practical garment for motoring, walking and golfing.

Then we have the mannish tailor-polo and mixture separate coats made with the new inverted reglan sleeve that gives it such a real smart effect, which makes it almost irresistable.

Then again the new effects in wrappy costs with the large flaring sleeves and throw collars all trimmed with contrasting colors that give them such beautiful lines and the new capes made in soft materials that may be worn by the most conservative or extreme dresser. The latter successful articles as they are practical for all occasions.

In all these above items embroidery and braiding play important parts.

It never rains but it pours and so in the new dresses they just are pouring with beads of all kinds. Particularly are the new Crepe Romaine dresses that are elaborately trimmed with the new jet beads. And colors are playing important parts with the latest imported creations. Basque dresses with tight bodices and flary skirts made in the satin back Canton are the rage right now. And Spiral Crepes trimmed with lace and colored etchings seem to be very popular. Then there are some beautiful dresses made in the new Crepe Esponge, the Molly O and Crepe Knit.

And as a whole the new styles for Spring will be very pleasing to the feminine eye as well as to the purse.

Soviets to Make Bid at Genoa for World Trade Aid

By DAVID M. CHURCH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 18—Soviet Russia is entering the Genoa conference with the firm conviction that there can be no economic rehabilitation of Europe except through the rehabilitation of Russia, but at the same time she will resist any effort at "economic and political enslavement," according to M. Leonid Krassin, head of the Russian Trade Delegation in London.

"The problem of the economic regeneration of Russia is not one merely of humanitarian activity, and is not confined in its scope to the salvation of Russia alone," M. Krassin declared. "Without it there is no hope for the regeneration of the economic life of Europe and even of the whole world.

"Heavy industry in Russia can be restored only by some form of general measure which shall embrace simultaneously all the enterprises of the given area. It is difficult to outline the mechanism of such an apparatus of reconstruction; but the most effective would appear to be the formation of several large trusts, with the participation both of the Soviet State and of foreign capital the Soviet State granting land and existing equipment, and foreign capital giving in return a definite proportion of the output as compensation for the rights it has acquired."

Soviet Leaders Are Wary

Soviet leaders are wary in entering into negotations with allied statesmen, Krassin indicated.

"One may anticipate that the financiers and industrialists of Western Europe and the politicals, no less, will undergo a great temptation to utilize their participation in the economic reconstruction of Russia to bring about th eeconomic and political enslavement of our country," M. Krassin said. "If this situation arises an agreement is impossible, and and a stubborn and protracted struggle lies before us. For Russia this will mean delay in her economic development and the death of millions. For Europe this will mean a long drawn-out crisis, ever increasing in extent and gravity; millions of unemployed, and the growth of the sufferings and indignation of the working masses."

ALL BUT THREE STATES PASS LAWS GIVING AID TO ALL WAR VETERANS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 18—Cash awards totaling $191,339,200 are being paid to veterans of the world war in 13 states and $165,500,000 more in "adjusted compensation" will be disbursed under legislation already passed, according to a nation-wide survey by the Bank of America, of New York.

Ohio is the only state now paying awards which was not paying them in August, 1921, when the Bank of America made its first survey on this subject. Missouri will be ready to distribute $15,000,000 in a few weeks. Every state in the Union excepting Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, has passed legislation giving or authorizing aid for war veterans of some nature, either in the form of cash, monetary aid for relief, exemptions or other benefits.

New York is the only state in the country which was preparing to pay bonuses last August which has since been forced to abandon the plan because of adverse court opinions.

From $10 for every month of service in Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey, Ohio, Vermont and Wisconsin up to $25 a month in North Dakota is the range of money bonuses being paid. A number of the states specify maximum limits to adjusted compensation for each veteran, varying from $100 in New Jersey to $500 in Oregon. Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island have "adjusted" veterans' compensation to the extent of $100 outright in cash.

Other states in which cash awards are being paid are Michigan, Minnesota, South Dakota and Washington. Many of the states have practically completed the work of disbursing the bonuses.

Referendum elections are to be held in a number of states to vote on cash propositions. Next November Illinois will pass on the proposal of a $55,000,000 bond issue to pay its veterans $15 per month of service up to $300; Kansas will vote on a $25,000,000 issue to provide $1 a day for veterans' war service, and Montana will decide on $4,500,000 to pay its veterans $10 per month of service, $200 maximum. In November, 1923, Iowa's voters will consider the issuance of $22,000,000 in bonds for the purpose of paying its veterans 50 cents per day of service up to $350. In November, 1924, if the legislature passes again a bill on the subject, Pennsylvania will vote on a $35,000,000 bond issue to pay its veterans at the rate of $10 per month of service up to $200 maximum. Legislation on this subject is reported as pending in California ($18,000,000 bond issue), Colorado, Kentucky ($10,000,000), Florida and New York. In Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas and Utah legislation on bonuses has been brought in, but has so far failed of passage.

Many millions of dollars, in addition to the money already distributed, are being spent by the states in other aid for veterans. Relief for needy ex-service men and women is provided for in 15 states; funds out of which loans are made to veterans have been authorized in three states.

Fourteen states have definite provisions for helping veterans in their education. Veterans' welfare commissions or boards have been instituted in eight states. Help in buying homes is given in five, and assistance in settling on farms is offered in eleven. Four states make specific provision for veterans seeking employment. State civil service preference has been adopted in 16 states.

Nine states have granted exemption from taxation. Most of the states have provided for the admission of veterans to state hospitals and state soldiers' homes, and many have special hospitals for insane of tubercular veterans.

The most general method of paying for soldier aid is that of bond issues, the Bank of America chart shows. Twenty states have issued or will issue bonds, notes and certificates to provide funds for their veterans' aid. Michigan leads with $30,000,000 bond issue.

LIBRARIAN JOINS FRENCH TRIP TO DESERT WILDS

(International News Service)

CHILLICOTHE, O., Feb. 18—Burton E. Stevenson, well known novelist and city librarian, has sailed for Constantine, Algeria, where he is to join a special French military expedition, headed by Colonel J. Maurice, his personal friend.

The commission is scheduled to visit the interior of the desert country, the principal oasis and the Auree mountain regions, calling on the tribal chiefs, for the purpose of consolidating their support of their government.

YOUR HEALTH

Early Attention the Way to Relieve a Crippled Child

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

DURING the visit to New York of the great Viennese surgeon, Dr. Adolph Lorenz, there were brought to light thousands of crippled children. The sad thing about it is that hundreds of these little sufferers have needlessly endured the humiliation and inconvenience of deformity. They had curable ailments, but because their parents had not discovered this fact they have gone untreated.

Let me give you this bit of advice:

Never endure in silence the agony of a hidden disease. Seek the advice of the best doctor you can find. Never settle down to the conviction that there is no hope. You have no right to set up your lay opinion against the wisdom and skill of a learned profession.

Never succumb to the fear of disease. Make up your mind you're going to conquer it. Enlist the aid of able physicians and let them direct the battle.

Theodore Roosevelt had tuberculosis, but he grappled with the white plague and won his fight. What Roosevelt did you can do. Don't settle down to accept the inevitableness of a crippled body, until you have exhausted every possible means of escape.

It is the duty of parents to make sure their baby is sound in body and limb. Don't fuss about the little chap and work yourself into a fever of worry for fear he may be abnormal in some respect. But let your doctor look him over now and again. Between times watch him carefully. Should he fall from his high chair or from the bed, make sure his bones and joints are not damaged. An injury from such a common and apparently trivial cause may result in deformity.

Children sometimes complain of pain in their joints or muscles. It is too common a thing to describe these as "growing pains." Insist on having your doctor examine the child who suffers this way and he will find out if there is any physical defect responsible for the symptoms.

Following acute illness—especially the contagious diseases—there is sometimes swelling in a joint or there may be pain. If neglected, this may result in permanent stiffness of the joint or deformity.

Unfortunate, indeed, are those little babies born with deformities or dislocated bones. The parents, too, are to be pitied. But don't despair even in these unhappy circumstances, because many such conditions are correctable.

The earlier joint troubles are taken under treatment, the greater the chance of complete and permanent cure. Don't trust the case to some inexperienced or doubtful person. Go to a skilled joint and bone diseases. With early attention there is every prospect of material benefit, if not of perfect cure.

Proof That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is of Great Help at This Period

Metropolis, Illinois.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it is all it claims to be and has benefited me wonderfully. I had been sick for eight months with a trouble which confined me to my bed and was only able to be up part of the time, when I was advised by a friend, Mrs. Smith, to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I was so much benefited by the use of these medicines that I was able to be up and about in two weeks. I was at the Change of Life when I began taking the medicines and I passed over that time without any trouble. Now I am hale and hearty, do all my housework, washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cooking, all there is to do about a house, and can walk two or three miles without getting too tired. I know of several of my neighbors who have been helped by your medicines."—Mrs. EMMA CULVER, 705 E. 7th St., Metropolis, Illinois.

ONLY one month—the shortest month of all the twelve—yet what a month of birthdays it is! There great Lincoln and great Washington, both born within the magic of these few days and Dan Cupid, who—under the auspices of the benevolent St. Valentine—holds his celebration just between these great events.

Even HER birthday and HIS birthday—falling, perhaps, months apart—may not hold the significance with which Dan Cupid's Day is invested, because THIS day may be the birthday of the expression of their love EACH for the other—this is THE welcome birthday month indeed for all devoted lovers.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a young girl and need some help. My mother is always scolding me. She says I comb my hair too old, and she scolds me in front of my friends. I don't like this. Sometimes I feel like running away.

I'm only 16 years old. She calls me names, and I get angry and don't speak to her for about three days. I'm discouraged, and don't know what to do. Please tell me if I should run away or not. I'm a very pretty girl. Please give me your best advice. BUTTERFLY.

BUTTERFLY: Do you do everything you can to please your mother, my dear, and try to make her happy? Think of all she has done for you in your lifetime, how much she really cares for you, and remember that you may not always have a mother to advise and help you, so be very grateful and very loving with her. Try patiently every day to help her and make her happy, and I am sure that things will go more smoothly.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed in care of this office.

As to Cerebral Structure.

So far as cerebral structure goes, it is clear that men differ less from the chimpanzee and orang, than these do even from the monkeys, and that the difference between the brain of the chimpanzee and of man is almost insignificant, when compared with that between the chimpanzee brain and that of a lemur.—J. REMINISCENCES

By J. ADLAI WEST

The garret was a great place. It was away up stairs, you know, and was the theater if you please in which children staged the play of childhood. In the two story cedar log house where I remember the garret, it was a comfortable sized room devoid of any furniture whatsoever, furnishing an admirable place for the plays incident to childhood. The rainy days of the past week brought vividly to mind the happy days spent in the garret.

It was the custom among children of my day to assemble there especially on days when the weather was so inclement as to preclude the possibility of playing out doors.

On some of these occasions of assembly in that treasured place it was the custom to have preachingg service just as it impressed us when we attended the services at the church. One of the number was selected to read a selection from the bible and preach. The pulpit consisted of a chair or box usually upon which the preacher would stand and deliver the sermon.

The singing was done by the other children and would be some familiar tune which they had learned at church. It was arranged before hand that some one of them should get very happy before the service was over, for no service was considered completed until some display of this kind.

I remember to have read a book of sermons that was in may father's library, and remember some of the authors: Thomas O. Summers, Bishop Wilson, Rev. Doggett, Rev. Wadsworth, and others whose names I do not now recall.

One sermon in that book of sermons which I remember distinctly, and although it has been forty years since I read it, the text used is familiar to me to this day. "Why should it be thought a thing incredable with you that God should raise the dead."

This emphasizes the fact that early impressions are very lasting. The impressions may seemingly desert one for a time, but they come trooping back as maturer years come to one and the reality of their truthfulness and impressiveness is doubly stressed. This brings to mind the thought; are we not too careless with the impressions created on the minds of the young all about us, especially so, when they are the keenest observers extant today today, and the impressions gained, be they good or bad ling through the years. Do we not spend too much time with the mature and not enough with the young? In the great army of the young people is vested the citizenship of the morrow; the very basic foundation upon which the church and state must be built for the future. If this is a fact, should not there be more effort expended if possible to harness this great power for good while the potential possibilities housed in youth remain.

Early recollections are priceless treasures which all dearly prize, be they from an humble cottage or a mansion. They live, they grow, they remain as long as the faculty of mind is given. This fact is splendidly protrayed in the following:

'I am sitting today in my mansion,
Made up of brown stone and plate glass;
Where the fasionable crowd in their satins,
In beauty and pride daily pass;
But some how my heart steals in sadness,
From the fashions and follies away,
And I long for the old gabled homestead,
And the garret where I used to play."

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Happened Between Dr. Pettit and Claire Foster.

I'M so afraid Mother will overdo," I said worriedly, as Lillian and I hurried out to the big old barn which housed the cars.

"No doubt she will," Lillian replied composedly, "but it won't hurt her."

I suppose my face showed the startled query I was too polite to voice, for Lillian explained with a smile.

"It's a forty-to-one shot," she said, "that your mother-in-law is pretty well fed-up with her daughter Elizabeth and the children. Her nerves are pretty nearly on the ragged edge, and if she didn't have any physical labor to do she'd exercise her nerves by going into one of her tantrums and raveling you. As it is, she can juggle the frying-pan and bang the double boiler until she gets the choler out of her system. By night she'll be so tired she'll go to sleep like a lamb."

"By night none of our lives will be worth a penny whistle," I laughed.

"But we all possess excellent footwork, and she'd be too tired to chase us," Lillian retorted.

"I wish Elizabeth would go home," I said inhospitably, but the addition of a rocking-chair guest like my sister-in-law and four obstreperous youngsters to a maidless household was enough, I felt, to make almost any chatelaine quail.

"She'll go tomorrow, mark what I'm telling you," Lillian prophesied. "Her mother will put her to work today, and from what I have observed of your sister-in-law, labor of any sort is anathema to her."

"I hope Mother piles it on her today," I said viciously, and relieved, though half-ashamed of my outburst, I climbed into my car and backed it out of the barn.

An Important Call.

"Poor, unsuspecting Elizabeth!" Lillian apostrophized, as we rolled down the driveway past her windows, the shades of which were still drawn. "Little she knows what is in store for her today. Oh, joy! Madge, you needn't turn your head, you're past now, anyway, but if you could have seen your mother-in-law just now as I saw her! Elizabeth's window shade went up with a jerk, and Mother Graham, still ho'ding the cord with which she had sent it up, was framed in the window registering disgust, indignation and all the other emotions appropriate to the occasion. Send the car along, old dear, I'm anxious to get back. It promises to be an eventful and entertaining morning."

Send the car along I did, accordingly, and we soon drew up before the old house in Sag Harbor in which Dr. Pettit has his office and his rather cheerless bachelor living-quarters.

The physician, as stiff and forbidding as ever, betrayed by his manner that he was a trifle shocked at our early call, as well as extremely curious about it. But Lillian gave him no time to indulge either emotion. While I busied myself with the four-months-old magazines in the reception room—I have yet to find a physician or a dentist who hasn't up-to-date magazines—she accompanied Dr. Pettit into his private office with much the air, I told myself, of a mother escorting a small boy into a punishment room.

"That Man—"

For fully ten minutes I heard the continuous murmur of their voices, Lillian's smooth, crisp, narrative—the physician's at first nervous, expostulating, finally acquiescent. And when Lillian returned to the reception room there were traces of a battle bitterly fought, hardly won, in her eyes.

Dr. Pettit, behind her, was visibly flustered. He turned to me awkwardly. "Your trip has done you good, Mrs. Graham," he said, with his best professional air. "You are looking exceedingly well. How are Mr. Graham and the child?"

"Both are very well, thank you," I returned demurely, hesitated, then asked abruptly, "And Miss Foster? Is she still in Sag Harbor, and well?"

I had asked the question simply to startle him out of his ridiculous self-consciousness, but when he perceptibly paled at the question I was angry I had asked it.

"She is not in Sag Harbor. As for her health, I do not know, for I have heard nothing from her for weeks."

His words and manner indicated that nothing was more trivial, more remote from his mind than the welfare and the whereabouts of Claire Foster. But I—who knew of his infatuation for the breezy western girl—caught the look of suffering in his eyes, and guessed that there had been some sudden and tragic ending of his love story. But I had no chance to say anything if I had wished to do so, for Lillian was already at the door, and made an imperative little signal for me to follow her. When we were safely out of hearing she exploded:

"Of all the colossal, coiled-in-red-tape, anointed idiots, that man is the most colossal and the most anointed!" she exclaimed.

"Won't he do what you wish?" I asked.

"You can bet the last cent you ever expect to have that he will," she replied emphatically. "But it took me ten minutes to convince him that he'd better. I hope your mother and Elizabeth are progressing with that breakfast. Wrestling with the dear doctor's mulish mind has given me a ravenous appetite."

Revelations of a Wife

What Madge "Ran Into" When She Reached Home.

AS Lillian and I drove into the farmhouse yard after our early visit to Dr. Pettit, we saw Elizabeth Harrison's four children and Marion busily engaged in dragging boxes and barrels from the rear of the barn to various vantage places on the front lawn.

"What do you suppose they're up to now?" I asked, careful, however, to keep out of my voice the dismay I felt at having the front lawn littered in so unsightly a fashion. I suppose when Junior gets to the restless age I shall be as indulgent to the "development of the play spirit" as any other up-to-date mother, but just now I fear that I am not possessed of a rapturous enthusiasm for some of the activities of some of the "modern children" I have seen.

Lillian looked over the array with an experienced eye.

"It looks to me like a circus," she said judicially. "Marion and her chum used to stage one occasionally in the drawing-room with hassocks and chairs, and small boxes. But one never can tell. It may be a mail-coach hold-up, or any other movie-fed fancy. When I was a child in the palezoic age, and even in the more recent years when you flourished, we used to have to depend upon our own imaginations for our dramatic amusements. But the modern child can run the gamut of ideas from the brain factories of scenario writers. I think I'll keep half an eye on that outfit. That small daughter of Elizabeth's has almost too much imagination to make her absolutely safe."

Lillian "Beats It."

She lowered her voice to an almost inaudible whisper as she spoke the last words, for I had rounded the turn in the driveway which led past the kitchen door to the barn—the only serious fault I find in the arrangement of the farmyard is the lack of any place to park the cars except in full view of the kitchen activities—and we had seen Elizabeth framed in the doorway for an unforgettable instant. Her face was flushed, and as I stopped the car I distinctly saw her angrily dash her hand against her eyes.

Mother Graham had succeeded in reducing her apparently placid, indolent daughter to tears, with less than an hour's work. I, who knew only too well my mother-in-law's gift for "ragging," acknowledged again her superiority in that particular line, for it had not appeared possible to me that anything short of an earthquake could disturb Mrs. Harrison's irritating placidity.

"I'd better beat it, Madge," Lillian whispered as we alighted. "I never saw a more promising prospect for a family row. Call me if you need me, and remember, I'll do kitchen police after breakfast. I'll predict Elizabeth will be mere pulp by that time."

"Quitter!" I hissed melodramatically after her. Then I walked slowly into the kitchen, calling loudly some banality to Lillian as I did so, that the warring pair in the kitchen might have due notice of my approach.

Elizabeth Instructs Madge.

Elizabeth was at the stove, stirring the cereal gallenly—incongruous as such an expression seems in connection with her supposedly unvarying cheerfulness—while Mother Graham, the light of battle in her eyes, was beating a yellow batter into lightness at the kitchen table.

"Margaret!" My name heralded my entrance. It was uttered in the explosive manner I know so well, and I recognized the meaning of the sound. It meant that Mother Graham now intended to turn her attention to me.

"Yes, Mother, what is it?" I answered dutifully.

"What is it?" she mocked scathingly. "I should think anybody with two eyes in her head could see what it is. Here we are with breakfast all ready and not a soul in the house ready to eat it. Dicky isn't up, and I suppose that blessed Richard Second is awake by this time, and those children out in the yard are a sight. Not one of them is washed for breakfast, and—"

I moved toward the door, glad of a chance for escape on any terms.

"I will attend to it all right away, Mother," I interrupted hastily. "I will go up to Junior, and then waken Dicky, and Lillian and I will attend to the children."

"Pardon me, Margaret," Elizabeth said sweetly, as she lifted her heat-flushed face from the stirring of the cereal, "but I must ask you not to give my children a command of any sort. Just request them to do whatever you wish. It is against my principles to command them, and I much doubt whether they would obey anything so alien to their bringing-up."

"I am not apt to issue any commands to them," I retorted shortly, as I went hastily out of the door, and was conveniently deaf to the call of "Margaret, come back here," which my mother-in-law sent after me.

But I rejoiced wickedly at her next words addressed to Elizabeth, and which began in familiar fashion:

"Of all the anointed idiots—"

Parallel Seen in Slaying of Taylor And Elwell, Who Lived in Similar Way

By MARGERY REX,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—It is easy for the enemy of a man who lives secretly to murder him unseen.

In mysterious manner two men who ate the secret bread of pleasure and drank sweet stolen waters have died by the fury of assassins still unknown.

The career of William Desmond Taylor, slain movie director, in life and death paralleled that of "Jim" Elwell, so strangely shot down in his New York home two years ago.

Each lived alone, and alone each was attacked. From both Taylor and Elwell, in their last moments, someone fled.

Men who shun daylight are apt to make themselves tempting targets for marksmen in the dark.

Taylor's leave-taking of life was just as mysterious as his inexplicable departure in 1908 from his wife and child and just as unaccountable as his later change of name, for the dead man was known originally as William Cunningham Deane-Tanner.

Who Was slayer?

Who could have arraged Taylor's clandestine rendezvous with death?

Suspicion goes over the list of possibilities. There is, for instance, Edward F. Sands, the dead man's valet, who robbed his master and whom, one of the feminine stars says, Taylor vowed to kill at sight. And there are the men who are interested in the women Taylor knew.

Will one of the brilliant stars of that glamorous world, whose little suns are Cooper-Hewitts, shoot down to earth and be obliterated in the tragedy?

Like his prototype Elwell, Taylor was acorded by the opposite sex, but cared for none constantly. In fact, it is said he was indifferent to love. Interesting, travelled, well - read, a brilliant talker and a discreet confidant, Taylor held the friendship of many women. Whether or not his relations with them were sentimental cannot be determined at this time.

But why did he disappear in 1908 from a beautiful wife and daughter, from a host of friends and a gay social circle?

Rover by Nature

Rover by nature, William Deane-Tanner came to New York from Dublin in the late nineties. Movies were unheard of then, and the young Irishman did not dream of the magic lantern which would create a life of splendor for him and for thousands of others.

He was interested in antiques and objects of art. He entered into that business near Thirtieth street and Fifth avenue at a period when this neighborhood held many small shops with fascinating wares when the Holland House was flourishing and fine old homes and old - fashioned apartment houses had not been superceded by business.

"Florodora" was then in her first fling. Among the pretty girls of that first cast was Ethel May Harrison. They met and married in 1901.

Clubs, racetrack, theaters and gay parties drew this restless individual who because of his addiction to a life of pleasure did not cause serious worry to his family when he disappeared in 1908 for what his friends thought would be a short time.

Waved Good-by to Wife

At the Vanderbilt Cup Race that year Taylor waved good-by to his wife, later sent to their apartment in the Colonial Hotel for his clothes but remained unheard from until the movies began to flash faces around the world. In this way his friends knew that Taylor was Tanner and not dead by any means.

His wife meantime had divorced him and married Edward Robins, restaurateur, now proprietor of Delmonico's. Tanner, become Taylor, tired of the old life, found new outlet for his whims and roving disposition in the adventures that he directed for the films.

Taylor's associates were men and women whom the screen brought before all of us. We know their mannerisms, their charms and their features as well as those of our own relatives. Mabel Normand was his "pal". Claire Windsor was a friend Neva Gerber was once engaged to the man, but they decided in a perfectly friendly way not to marry. He admired pretty Mary Miles Minter, famous long ago as "The Littlest Rebel."

Lived Like Elwell

Taylor lived as Elwell did, alone, and his servants went away at night. While this mode of life encourages intrigue not possible in a more open existence, it makes the occupant of a lonely house liable to attack. Blackmailer or murderer could easily gain access to his intended victim.

And, like the slain whist expert, Taylor received young women callers freely at his home. He had received a visit from one of them and the very garments were found in his home as in Elwell's.

The killing of Joseph Elwell is to dispel its impersonal quality.

Who killed Taylor-Tanner. Star or servant or jealous rival?

PAY RAISED, BUT LACK OF TEACHERS FELT

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Despite the large increase in teachers' salaries, there is a pronounced teacher shortage in New York City, according to the report of F. L. Mills, director of the division of appointments and records of the New York City Board of Education.

"We are still behind the figures of 1918 in the number of candidates," Mr. Mills declared, "and we are considerably behind the figures of ten years ago; for evample, the number years ago; for example, the number of candidates for 1911 was 1,951, while for 1921 it was 1,395, despite the big increase of population and the consequent necessity for more teachers.

Teachers' salaries in New York City now go as high as $3,700, and $500 extra as head of a department in high schools. Teachers say the increased pay is more than offset by higher rents and other living costs.
